BIGGEST SHAKE UP IN STATE

Fifty Boards Abolished in Reorganization Plan Before Legislature

More than fifty State commissions and departments are abolished, about 125 commissioners, department heads and others holding important State offices with salaries ranging as high as $8,000 are ousted, the jobs of 30,000 public employes are placed more or less in jeopardy and fifty new commissions with hundreds of new jobs are created in the plans for the greatest shakeup in the history of the State.

The tentative plans for the reorganization, abolition and consolidation of State boards of department and commissions became known today for the first time.

The Republican administration, with Governor Coolidge in charge, will shake the biggest plum tree ever known to the State.

Under an amendment adopted by the people, the Legislature will this year merge the more than 100 State boards and commissions into twenty departments. The tentative draft

BREAD PRICE NOT TO DROP FOR SIX WEEKS

New York, May 17.—A reduction of bread prices is not to be expected before the new wheat crop begins to move in about six weeks. Then there may be a moderate decline. This announcement was made by Julius H. Barnes, director of the Food Administration Grain Corporation, who said it was hoped that no advance in bread prices will be necessary in the intervening period on account of higher prices for the limited amount of old flour still on hand. The bakers, he added, have promised to maintain present bread prices so far as possible.

Suicide Rather Than Trial; Threat by Ex-Kaiser

Amsterdam, May 17.—The ex-Kaiser of Germany was reported today to have told his associates that "he would commit suicide rather than face trial before an allied court.

Paris, May 17.—The former Kaiser and his secretary left the castle at Amerongen, Holland, a month ago and are now living in the German province of Baden, under the names of Persegg and von Hilde, the Camet De La Semaine declared today.

The Camet De La Semaine is a popular weekly publication. Some members of its staff enjoy the confidence of prominent French officials, and it frequently carries in its columns of gossip reliable information on "inside" happenings in French political affairs.

KILLED BY WOOD ALCOHOL; MANY MADE ILL

One man is dead in Boston from wood alcohol poisoning. Two others were seriously ill by the same liquor and is on the "dangerous" list in the City Hospital.

These cases, combined with several cases of men made violently ill by wood alcohol or denatured alcohol in the past week, have caused the police and medical examiners to send out stern warning against resorting to these commercial alcohols as substitutes for whiskey or other licensed liquors.

Joseph Murphy of Lansing street, Roxbury, was found unconscious on Stevens street in the South End today and died at City Hospital.

William Hennessy, sixty-four years of No. 108 Boston street, Dorchester, was picked up unconscious on the Common, near the corner of Beacon and Charles streets, and is in critical condition at the City Hospital.

Edward Leonard, fifty, unmarried, was picked up from in front of No. 624 Tremont street and taken to the City Hospital, where he also is on the danger list.

All three were victims of wood alcohol poisoning. Medical Examiner Timothy Leary, who examined Murphy's body, said:

"The drinking of wood alcohol and denatured alcohol is growing so rapidly that legislation to regulate its sale is needed. Dealers in these alcohols should use discretion in selling it. Wood alcohol particularly is an acute poison. It means death to the drinker unless given treatment quickly."

The police say that tipplers of wood and denatured alcohol mix these liquors with milk and water, the milk being supposed to neutralize the poisonous effect of the alcohol. But this neutralization is only temporary at the most. The poison then works.

Instructions have been sent from police headquarters to the different stations for policemen to watch closely for any signs of such poisoning in intoxicated men and to rush the men to hospitals instead of taking them to stations.

A week ago nine men were found unconscious on the Randolph street playground in the South End. They had been holding a wood alcohol party. The lives of all were saved by quick treatment at the City Hospital.

U. S. FLAG ON RHINE 5 YEARS

Government Agrees to Keep Troops in Germany for at Least That Period

Paris, May 17.—The United States has definitely agreed to keep troops on the Rhine and to keep the United States flag flying over Germany territory for at least five years, it was learned in American official circles here today.

One American delegate said that the American force would be limited to a small number of troops, probably volunteers.

The fashion in which Germany carries out the terms of the treaty will determine if troops shall be maintained on the Rhine for a longer period.

IRISH ENVOYS IN ANGER AT SNUB BY GEORGE

By International News Service.

Paris, May 17.—The Irish-American delegation from the United States, headed by Frank P. Walsh, returned to Paris this afternoon in an angry mood because of Premier Lloyd George's failure to receive them, as promised. Walsh this afternoon handed Secretary of State Lansing a demand that the United States delegates insist that safe conducts be granted to the delegates from Ireland, De Valera, Plunkett and Griffith, so that they can proceed to Paris and present their claims to the Peace Conference.

Unless this demand is granted the American delegates declare that protest meetings will be held all over the United States demanding that President Wilson force action that will permit the Irish delegates to appear before the peace conference.

DANIELS FAVORS GERMAN FLEET BEING SUNK

By International News Service.

New York, May 17.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, who arrived from France today on the transport Mt. Vernon, declared that the surrendered German fleet ought to be sunk for the moral lesson it would carry to the whole world.

Secretary Daniels said that destruction of the ships had its practical side also, for the German warships are in such condition that it would require a tremendous expenditure of money to refit them.

The Mount Vernon brought 4,424 troops.

Secretary Daniels was greatly pleased when informed of the progress of the navy flyers.

"Good, good," he smilingly declared. "We'll make it sure."

"American soldiers in France are chiefly interested in getting home quickly," the secretary said, and added that the navy is doing great work in bringing them back.

NC-4 WINS OVERSEAS RACE FROM TREPASSEY

American aviators are the first to fly across the Atlantic. The NC-4, of the American naval seaplane trio which "hopped off" at Trepassey, Newfoundland, shortly after 6 o'clock last night on the "long jump" over the Atlantic Ocean, arrived at Horta, capital of Fayal (Azores group), at 9:25 a. m. today. The NC-4 flew the 1,389 miles in 15 hours 18 minutes, an average speed of 90.6 miles an hour, or a shade better than one and one-half miles a minute.

A cable from London flashed the news at noon that all three of the American seaplanes had reached the Azores, the last to arrive there landing at 1:35 p. m.

According to this cable the NC-1 and NC-3 have safely covered the distance, making "Uncle Sam" a three-time winner in this first attempt of airmen of any nation to fly across the Atlantic.

A wireless dispatch from Punta del Gada, Azores, said that the NC-1 was giving the NC-4 a hot race for the Azores. The same dispatch said that the NC-3 was last reported by Station 17 and it was believed that Commander John H. Towers, in command of the NC-3 and of the general flight, was operating independently of the American destroyer patrol that lined the route from Trepassey to the Azores.

The NC-4 covered itself all the more with glory because it was delayed on the first leg of the course by engine trouble, which forced it to lay over at

CITY TO SPEND $95,000 ON FIRE APPARATUS

Boston is to have $95,000 worth of new fire apparatus. Authority to purchase this equipment was given by Mayor Peters to Fire Commissioner John R. Murphy. The American La France Fire Engine Company will execute the contract.

The purchase is made in accordance with the report of a special commission appointed by the mayor to investigate and decide on what kind of apparatus should be used. With this purchase, the Boston Fire Department becomes 55 per cent motorized.

The new items will include: One 750-gallon, one 1,000-gallon and two 750-gallon triple pumping engines, three combination chemical and hose cars, and two aerial trucks, one of seventy-five and one of eighty-five feet.

This is the first purchase of apparatus under the Peters administration. Mayor Peters has about $235,000 to spend for this purpose the current year.

ANOTHER DIRIGIBLE TO MAKE ATTEMPT

New York, May 17.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, who arrived here from Europe, declared that a second navy dirigible balloon probably would attempt a trans-Atlantic flight. He said that the mishap that befell the C-5 will not deter the navy's plans. It is thought here the the C-4 now at Rockaway, will make the attempt.

There is a difference of approximately four hours in time between the Azores and the Eastern United States. When it is noon in Washington it is about 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the Azores.

SEAPLANES IN CRASH; TWO AIRMEN KILLED.

Pensacola, Fla., May 17.—Flying at a great height, two seaplanes crashed together today over Pensacola harbor, killing Ensign F. M. Fowler of Salem, Mass., and Chief Quartermaster Eyar, address not given. Both bodies were recovered.

FLIERS TO CABLE EXCLUSIVE REPORTS OF TRIP TO AMERICAN

The Boston American will have the best and most complete reports, both descriptive and scientific, of the history-making trans-Atlantic flight of the three Naval-Curtiss planes, already on their way to the shores of Europe. Exclusive accounts will be cabled to the American by three experts, Commander Holden C. Richardson, pilot of the NC-3; Lieutenant-Commander M. A. Mitscher, pilot of the NC-1, and Lieutenant E. F. Stone, pilot of the NC-4. Whichever flying boat gets across, the American will have the full log and exclusive [illegible] by cable from the pilot of that plane.

NINETY MILE SPEED IN DASH ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

Chatham, Cape Cod, catching up with the other two seaplanes later at Trepassey.

On the second leg of its delayed start the NC-4 flew from Halifax, N. S., to Trepassey, N. F., at an average speed of 83 miles an hour, the NC-1 and NC-3 having averaged on the same leg only 75 miles an hour.

But today the NC-4 really "stretched itself," so to speak, its four Liberty motors drove its twin-bladed propellers at such terrific rate that the seaplane hit up an average clip of more than 90 miles an hour.

NC-3 FIRST TO START.

The NC-3, the flagship of the trio, in charge of Commander John H. Towers, "hopped off" first at Trepassey at 6:06 o'clock last night. The NC-4 "hopped off" a minute later, at 6:07. The NC-1 followed at 6:09.

Wireless messages from the fliers to United States destroyers stationed about fifty miles apart along their course gave exciting reports of the flight.

The NC-4 passed over Station 14, about 700 miles out from Trepassey, at 3:04 a. m. today.

The NC-1 was reported at 3:15 a. m. as flying over Station 13, which is about 650 miles from Trepassey. It was evident that the NC-4 was well ahead of the NC-1 in time and distance.

NC-4 PAR IN THE LEAD.

The NC-3 passed Station 13 (600 miles) at 2:32 a. m.

The NC-4 passed Station 18, which is 900 miles from Trepassey, at 5:49 a. m. The NC-1 passed the same station at 6:16.

The next report showed that the NC-4 had passed Station 22, which is 1,100 miles from Trepassey, at 8:10.

Great Crowd Cheers Intrepid Fliers as They Start on Ocean Journey

Trepassey, N. F., May 17.—A few minutes after 6 o'clock (Eastern time) NC-3, flagship of the squadron, soared into the air at the entrance to the narrows leading from the inner to the outer bay and was followed by NC-4 and NC-1 in the order named.

With roaring engines and whirring propellers, hulls and widespread wings gleaming in the rays of the setting sun, the three huge planes lifted high above the hills walling the harbor, and headed east on their history journey across the broad Atlantic.

Their going was watched by a great crowd of Newfoundlanders, who bade them God-speed with loud cheers and much waving of hats and handkerchiefs until they had passed from sight beyond Mistaken Point, which was the official turning point of the most daring sea enterprise since Columbus set out from Palos with his little caravels to find a westward passage to the Indies and stumbled upon a new world.

NC-4 "SHAKES" "JINX."

Before another sun sets the world will know whether the long leap has been achieved for the first time and the pioneer attempt won by the United States navy.

The three planes rose from the bay within a period of eight minutes, NC-4 nearly a minute after the first had followed her from Rockaway, and was first to take the air.

Commander Towers lifted her from the water after a half-mile dash and sped above the turbulent bay waters between the rocky hills and reappeared high in the air from around the peninsula before the other planes could leave the harbor.

OFF AT 6:11.

For eighteen minutes NC-4 circled the countryside in the vicinity of the bay, landing in the inner harbor beside her sister ships. All three craft bobbed and quivered in the high wind for a few minutes; then Commander John H. Towers urged the flagship NC-3 toward the head of the narrows and at 6:03 p. m. (Eastern time) was in the air. Commander Read followed with NC-4, and at 6:05 was also in the air.

NC-1 plowed onward then and at 6:11 was aloft.

Meanwhile NC-3 and NC-4 came into view again, looming east from behind the headland, while NC-1, picking up speed at every whirl of her propellers, poked her bow into view as they moved in orderly procession out of sight at 6:20.

Commander Towers was leading with the flagship by about two miles, while NC-3 and NC-4 were about three miles apart at the base of the triangle. All were closing up rapidly as though to keep the scheduled distance two miles apart.

CREWS SHAKE HANDS.

The thing that men had dreamed of since the first filmsy structure of wood, cloth and machinery was flung into the air was on the eve of realization. But the start of the contest against time and the elements was made with scant ceremony and little formality.

The commander and crews, gathered on the deck of the mine layer Aroostook, shook hands with Captain Crenshaw and other naval officers and were carried in launches to the seaplanes.

They smiled their thanks at the godspeed given on the deck before their departure. Officers and seamen lining the rails of the Aroostook and Prairie cheered, and the airmen waved their hands and took their positions in the cockpits of the sea fliers.

A westerly wind ruffled the surface of the harbor, breaking the waves into whitecaps and a wealth of sunshine poured over all. The people of the village and the fishermen, whose tiny craft dotted the outer waters, were not aware of the great event about to take place until the giant air birds disappeared over the hills and then reappeared above the horizon.

As they swept slightly northward the gale which was blowing seemed to adapt itself to the desire of the fliers swooping over Mistaken Point, the last land they will sight until they reach the Azores.

After all three planes had been tested to a note of steam to warm the motor and gasoline had been drained half left, Commander Towers at 4:38 ordered the engines of NC-3 started.

With the commander standing in the bow, his face flushed against the setting sun, his leather garments and helmet making him resemble a weather-beaten wooden figurehead of some viking craft, the flagship started from the anchorage and moved toward the Narrows.

At 4:55 Commander Patrick N. L. Bellinger followed with NC-1 and at 5:12 Commander Read with NC-4 moved from the anchorage.

The planes coursed in concentric circles at three almost touching each other, again half a mile apart, their engines roaring like a thousand lions on every side. Then the pilots, speeding as fast that even the bright sunlight scarce struck through the geared propellers, waved to the seaplanes tossing wearily from the anchorage and the observers of ocean monsters encompassing in a death struggle.

LAUNCHES READY TO AID.

Members of the naval squad were stationed on the roofs of buildings and on the hills around the bay to inform the fleet of the progress of the planes and launches were manned and ready to go to their machines in case of any accident.

Commander Towers and his fellow officers admitted that the flight was a tough problem even with the aid of destroyers. The change of propellers on all the planes since leaving Rockaway Point has thrown all calculations of gasoline consumption and the matter of safety askew. The pilots and navigators experienced similar ignorance of even the approximate performance of the machines in the long lean overseas.

The possibility of a landing being made at Horta instead of Punta Delgado is increased by doubt of the effectiveness of the new heavy propellers. (Horta is approximately 160 miles west of Punta Delgado.)

SIX MEN TO A PLANE.

Each plane is manned by six men. Commander Towers decided to carry full crews after a final discussion of the advisability of cutting the personnel to five men. Ponchos were also distributed to the crews to protect their clothing in the sea.

The Americans chatted about the chances of the British fliers waiting at sea Johns for better weather. Few believed the single-engined land planes could possibly succeed. More than one expressed the hope that Raynham and Hawker would give up the attempt.

The seaplane crews conceded the courage of their rivals but the feeling prevailed among them that death was invited by so reckless an attempt.

The speed of the NC planes was demonstrated by the 84-miles an hour flight of NC-4 from Halifax. Commander Read had favorable wind and sea for push his engines to their full power, so it is calculated that he could make almost the fliers to make as good as a hundred miles an hour on the Azores leg.

BRITISH PILOTS "ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN"

St. Johns, N. F., May 17.—After announcing this morning that they probably would not start across the Atlantic this afternoon, the two British airmen, Harry G. Hawker and F. P. Raynham, started at 1 o'clock that they had called off the flight for today. Weather conditions were said to be bad in the eastern Atlantic.

TWO-MAN PLANE MAKES 457 LOOPS

Washington, May 17.—Four hundred and fifty-seven consecutive loops were made during a flight of one hour and fifty-four minutes by Lieutenant Ralph J. Johnson and Mark R. Woodward at Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.

A Lepere two-seated fighting plane was used.

Commander Towers, who is thirty-four years of age, was born in Georgia and entered the Naval Academy in 1902.

After service on various warships, he was assigned to the aviation section for instruction three years before the outbreak of the European war. Midwinter of 1912 found him in charge of the aviation camp at the Guantanamo maneuvre grounds of the Atlantic fleet, and in September, 1914, as a lieutenant, he went to London as assistant to the American naval attache.

After a tour of duty on the staff of the chief of operations at Washington, during which he participated in the selection of aviation stations and won his commission as commander, Mr. Towers was designated early this year to develop the plans for the trans-Atlantic flight.

Lieutenant-Commander Read, 32 years of age, was born in New Hampshire. After leaving Annapolis he filled varied assignments until 1915, when he reported at the Naval

Way to Avoid Tax on Your Luncheon Sandwich

Would you avoid a war tax on your luncheonette?

Then don't stand up at the soda fountain to eat your sandwich and ice-cream soda. Just step into the restaurant connected with the same establishment, sit down and have a waitress attend you and you will avoid paying a war tax.

So says the bronze-haired cashier of a Summer street bakery-soda fountain-restaurant. She says those are the orders given her by government officials and she's at her wit's end trying to determine whether to add a war tax for all customers' checks.

She declares many people have kicked to avoid the war tax on ice-cream soda by sitting at table in the restaurant instead of standing at the fountain.

Where no other food is ordered, they are compelled to pay the tax, however. If the sandwich is eaten at the fountain, a tax is added to the check for soda or ice-cream.

NEW ENGLAND MAN PILOTS NC-4

New England is represented in America's gallant race for trans-Atlantic honors in the person of Lieutenant-Commander A. C. Read of the NC-4, who is a native of New Hampshire.

The commanders, pilots, radio operators and engineers on the flight, as announced by Commander Towers just before the "hop-off" at Trepassey, are as follows:

Late Cable Bulletins!

Paris, May 17.—The Big Four today began consideration of the reports of sub-committees dealing with German objections to the peace treaty. Tonight President Wilson will attend a theatrical performance given by members of the 80th Division of the American army.

Amsterdam, May 17.—President Ebert of Germany has sent word to the East Prussian government that the Germans "can in no way accept the peace terms in their present shape," according to a dispatch from Berlin today.

London, May 17.—The political storm in Germany aroused by the peace terms is clearing, and more and more people are making it known that they want Germany to sign the treaty, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today.

Paris, May 17.—The Ukrainians have launched an offensive against Poland, according to advices reaching here today. Heavy fighting is reported.

London, May 17.—British submarines are reported to have been sent into the Baltic Sea to operate against the Bolshevik navy.

Air Station at Pensacola, Fla. for instruction.

Two years later he took command of the aviation station at Bay Shore, on Long Island, later assuming a similar post at Miami, Fla.

While on the staff of the chief of naval operations at Washington the following year he was detached for temporary duty in connection with the camouflaging of seaplanes at Hampton Roads, Va., later holding changing assignments until he was named for participation in the trans-Atlantic flight.

Lieutenant-Commander Bellinger, born in South Carolina thirty-three years ago, went from the Naval Academy to sea duty, which included command of a submarine. He returned to the academy for aviation instruction in 1912, and the following year joined the Guantanamo Air Squadron.

After service in 1914 on the staff of the chief of naval aeronautics, he was assigned to the Pensacola station, where he won promotion to the command of the Hampton Roads aviation camp, to which he reported later in 1917.

He was on detached Navy Department duty when he was selected as one of the trans-Atlantic fliers.

WARM WELCOME AWAITS FLIERS AT LISBON

Lisbon, May 17.—Three large buoys at the mouth of the Tagus River mark the landing place for the three American seaplanes after their epoch-making flight across the Atlantic.

All is ready on this side of the world for the reception of the Americans. Several planes of the Portuguese air force plan to fly out to sea to meet the Americans and pilot them into port. The whole city of Lisbon will turn out to carry out in a demonstration in honor of the air pioneers.

WAGERS ON FLIGHT.

Lisbon, which is one of the greatest places in the world for the little God of Chance, is turning from its age-old pastime, roulette, and putting up its money on the outcome of the race. Odds of the American attempt to fly across the Atlantic. The betting is 4 to 1 against three planes successfully negotiating the flight; 2 to 1 against two getting across, and even money against one accomplishing the feat.

As soon as the aviators land here they will go aboard the American mine-layer Shawmut, where they will meet and receive congratulations from Admiral Plunkett, high officials of the Portuguese government, and others.

PORTUGUESE EXTEND AID.

At the request of United States Minister Burch, the Portuguese government has granted every possible help in the way of telegraph, wireless and other facilities in the Azores as well as in Portugal.

Admiral Plunkett, who is in charge of the flight arrangements, arrived in port from New York on board his flagship, the Rochester, after dropping a crew of American movie photographers and newspaper men at the Azores.

After the planes land at Punta Delgado it is expected they will rest only one day before starting on the 800-mile jump to Lisbon.

SUBWAY STATIONS KEEP OPEN LATER

Subway and Elevated stations will hereafter remain open thirty minutes after their wartime closing hour, beginning Sunday morning. In other words, instead of closing at midnight they will close at 12:30 a. m. The last trains and cars will leave the various stations at this hour, with the exception of trains for South Station and South Boston, which will leave Park street under at 12:25; trains for Cambridge leave South Station under, at 12:23; southbound trains from Friend street, 12:23; southbound trains from Milk, 12:34, and northbound trains from Essex, 12:23.

PROBE CHARGES OF COLLUSION AT LYNN

Police Seek "Graft" Evidence in Connection With Welcome to Troops

Charges of collusion between gamblers and the committee directing the celebration in honor of returned Lynn service men are being investigated by Deputy Chief of Police Edward D. Callahan.

The charges were made following the arrest of two men as gamblers in Meadow Park, after the police had been notified that a large number of former soldiers were being flecced.

The gamblers, who with others secured concessions from the committee, declared they had been informed the lid was off Friday and Saturday, and that they could go the limit. The police are investigating the assertion that the committee had been promised a 20 per cent. split by all the concessionaires.

Meyer Harris of Bennington street, East Boston, and Arthur L. Clark of New York, appeared before Judge Lummus in Lynn Court and pleaded guilty to pursuing a lottery. Clark also pleaded guilty to the larceny of $90.

Their arrest was made when Clarence W. Webster of Gardiner street, Lynn, complained that he had been robbed of $90, and that other ex-soldiers were being relieved of their money. Clark was fined $25 and ordered to make restitution of the $90, while Harris, who was said to have been working the crowd, was fined $10.

The committee in charge of the celebration for service men consists of about 100, with an executive committee of fifteen.

$750,000,000 FOR ROADS PLANNED

Washington, May 17.—Plans for rendering financial assistance to the railroads will be taken up by Congress soon after it convenes on Monday.

The general deficiency bill, which failed of passage last March, carried $750,000,000 for the railroads.

This year the amount may have to be increased to $1,000,000,000 because during March, April and May the railroads showed heavy deficits.

The House Committee on Appropriation is prepared to launch the new deficiency bill, probably before the close of next week. The present plan is to let the railroad appropriations be carried in this bill.

Other features of the deficiency bill will be appropriation to meet deficiencies in the various executive departments to prevent closing down of necessary work and the discharge of employes.

The general deficiency bill will be followed by the sundry civil bill which will carry $660,000,000 for the shipping board needed in the construction of ships, many of which are now under construction.

Both of these bills will be passed by July 1, if possible, leaders said.

SILENT ON WILSON'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Washington, May 17.—President Wilson's message to Congress, which will be read at sessions of both houses next Tuesday, was received at the White House today. White House officials refused to discuss the contents of the message, further than to state that it contained about 4,500 words. That it deals only with the domestic situation touching upon international matters only in a casual way, was learned from an authoritative source. The length of the message caused considerable surprise, for White House officials were of the impression that it would be one of the briefest ever sent Congress.

SEVEN ROW 300 MILES IN AN OPEN BOAT

Steamer Fagerland Arrives With Shipwrecked Men From Nova Scotian Schooner

Four days and nights in an open boat on the high seas, during which time they rowed 300 miles was the story brought to port today by seven men, arriving on the Norwegian steamer Fagerstad, Captain Andersen. The Fagerstad brought a cargo of sugar from St. Croix, Virgin Islands.

The shipwrecked men are the officers and crew of the three-masted Canadian schooner Richard B. Silver, wrecked last month off the coast of South America. The men are: Captain Ammon H. Zinck, Mate Ernest Himmelman and Steward Edward Rendall, all of Lunenburg, N. S.; Boswain M. J. Ingham of Long Island, Me.; Seamen Maurice Demeritz of Meteghan River, N. S.; William Brien, Ireland, and Harold S. Thomas, Liverpool England.

They were picked up by the Fagerstad off the coast of French Guiana April 23. Their schooner, which was new last year, was bound from Santos, Brazil, to Havre, France, with coffee She sprang sleak in a storm, and although the men pumped continuously for five days the schooner slowly filled. With the taking on of water their cargo of coffee swelled, opening still wider the seams.

Her decks awash, the vessel was abandoned. For the first three days and nights the men sustained heavy weather, but they were well provisioned. Rowing and bailing incessantly during the four days afloat, they were nearly exhausted when rescued. At the time of the rescue the Fagersand was outward bound from New York to Cayenne, whence she proceeded to St. Croix en route for Boston.

On their arrival here the rescued men went to the British consulate and Captain Zinck at once notified H. W. Adams of Lunenburg, owner of the ill-fated vessel.

NEWSBOYS VICTIMS OF CONFIDENCE MEN

The police are on the lookout for confidence men specializing in fleecing newsboys. Several youngsters who make their livelihood selling the dailies have fallen victims to these clever tricksters in the afternoon at Trinity Church.

Each had a number of papers left over. "Give me a couple of papers and I will help you out" said the stranger. After securing the papers he entered the postoffice and soon returned asking for the rest of the papers and change for a $5 bill which he said the would-be purchaser had. He received both papers and money and disappeared.

FIFI WIDENER, BEAUTIFUL HEIRESS, IN MYSTERY VISIT TO LENOX

HINTS OF ROMANCE IN TRIP

She Is Under Constant Attendance and Her Mother Has Twice Joined Her There

Lenox, May 17.—The fanciful gods of romance have shifted their headquarters temporarily from Mount Olympus to the heart of the Berkshire hills. They are watching dainty Fifi Widener of Philadelphia, daughter of Joseph E. Widener, traction magnate, who has been sojourning at the exclusive Curtis House. Assisting the gods of romance in their surveillance are two eagle-eyed persons, said to be detectives.

Mystery hovers over the scene. Mrs. Joseph E. Widener arrived Wednesday and had a conference with her daughter. Residents of the village whisper vaguely about a romance and refer to Miss Widener's presence in Lenox as though she were in exile.

FAMILY RETICENT.

Miss Widener, seventeen years old, arrived in Lenox on May 1, accompanied by a corps of servants, her brother, Areen, and the two "men of mystery." Their names did not appear on the registration register of the Curtis House.

Areen left Lenox the following day. It was noticed by villagers that Miss Widener never strolled or motored alone. Not until four days ago was the identity of the Philadelphia heiress made known. A man who had met her while she was visiting at Palm Beach, Florida, approached her and called her by name.

The man servant, who admits his name is "Cook," today said:

"All this talk about romance and exile is foolish. Miss Widener is not held here against her will. She is not believed to be contemplating marriage with a Philadelphia man. She is here for a rest."

The Widenears and their retinue took a motor spin in the Berkshire hills this afternoon. Mrs. Widener intimated she "might have a statement to give out later," but refused to discuss further the mystery of the heiress or the reason for her visit here.

Last Sunday Miss Fifi attended Trinity Episcopal Church. She was accompanied by her governess. On week days she has appeared clad in fluffy sport togs, including creations of lavender, rose and golden brown. She wears a pair of heavily rimmed spectacles.

On several motor jaunts in a large black touring car, Miss Widener has been chaperoned by "Cook," a man about fifty years old.

FIFI NEVER ALONE.

Only rumors are obtainable concerning the visit of the girl with the Widener retinue. One villager maintains that correspondence had been found which prompted an order on the part of the Widener parents to hasten Miss Fifi's departure from Philadelphia to the Berkshires.

She never dines alone. At times she appears to be simulating gay spirits, but her laughter is not the sound in public.

This is Mrs. Widener's second visit to the Berkshires, since the arrival of her daughter. She came here about ten days ago and remained for about twenty-four hours. Miss Fifi's brother also visited the girl and accompanied her to the Berkshires and stayed over a day. He is said to be a Harvard graduate and served overseas with the United States Army.

SLIGHT OF FIGURE.

Miss Widener is slight of figure and is brunette in type. If her journey here was planned as a trip to make her forget an affair of the heart, the Berkshires, with their gentle slopes of spring green, their trees burdened with new foliage and the New England May nights, with enchanted skies, seem rather out of joint with such an intent.

There were rumors afloat in the village anent a hurried departure of the Widener party from this place more isolated than the exclusive Curtis House, in the Berkshires. It was stated by a citizen that the "mysterious" nocturnal trip of the two men believed to be detectives was for the purpose of arranging quarters for the pretty heiress and attendants.

It is understood Papa Widener is informed at intervals by telegraph concerning his daughter's doings. He said to have been fled which may or may not have a bearing on the attitude of Miss Widener regarding certain matters.

NAVY GIRLS LAX IN DISCIPLINE PENALIZED

Yeomen (F) Facing Transfer From Boston Navy Yard Soon

Three hundred yeomen (F) in the First Naval District, including nearly 100 in Boston Navy Yard, must be placed on the inactive list or transferred to other stations before June 1. Today's order announcing the new rule states that 250 enlisted men and 189 officers in the district must also be transferred before the same date.

The order has created a sensation among the yeomen (F), most of whom wish to remain at this station. They are not to be allowed to choose the stations to which they will be transferred, as has been done in the past, but those who have been guilty of breaches of naval regulations will be picked and sent to other districts without consulting their preferences.

Girls are habitually late in reporting for duty at the navy yard, girls who disregard the orders forbidding additions of bits of personal adornment to the uniform and others who have failed in discipline will find themselves "out of luck" when the weeding out process begins.

Among the men, all the regular sailors now on shore duty are slated for speedy transfer to other ports. Also, 22 per cent of the reservists must leave Boston or wherever they may be stationed in the First Naval District.

The latest order, which was received at headquarters of the First District today, brings the personnel in this naval sub-division down to minimum. More than 5,000 men have been discharged or transferred out of the district since the signing of the armistice.

Estate Worth $12,687.82

An inventory of the estate of Mary A. Lafferty of Wakefield, who died Feb. 20, 1919, has been filed. The estate is valued at $12,687.82.

Boston friends of Captain Leopold Belloni, late of the Italian Royal Flying Corps, denied today a report that before the war he was employed in this city in an obscure position.

The report was one of many offered to explain the breaking of Captain Belloni's engagement to Miss Harriette A. Post of New York, a close friend of Mrs. Vincent Astor.

That the engagement is broken is common knowledge, and gossip has been rife for the past few days, ever since Captain Belloni turned up in New York a few days ago. Neither he nor the family of the young woman would give any reason for the estrangement.

LIVED IN BACK BAY.

While living in Boston, before joining the Italian aviation service, Belloni was an architectural engineer. He was, and is, rated very high in that profession. He lived in the Back Bay section and ranked in the highest Italian-American element in this locality. He is an Italian citizen and was originally from Rome.

Captain Belloni is about thirty-five years old, extremely good looking and of magnetic presence. He speaks English well and makes a distinguished appearance in any circle. He came to this country about a year ago with the Italian mission, remaining until the Christmas holidays. While here he met Miss Post, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Post, No. 3 East Fifty-first street, New York. He was stationed in Washington, and friends of the two noticed that Miss Post made frequent trips to that city.

HAD CHANGE OF MIND.

In New York, where he often visited, he was entertained by the circle in which Miss Post moves.

The young woman is a leader in the younger set, fond of music and painting, and an accomplished horsewoman. Members of her family declined that the engagement was broken because of any "discovery" as to Captain Belloni's antecedents. It was referred to by a close friend of the family as "a thorough gentleman."

"Miss Post broke her engagement merely because she changed her mind," said this person.

SLAYER FOILED REFORM PLAN OF VICTIM

Believed Mrs. Broadwell Intended to End Her Double Life

Barre, Vt., May 17.—As the two alleged slayers of Mrs. Harry E. Broadwell sit behind the bars in Washington County jail today following the continuance of their case for the Grand Jury on June 2 next, one redeeming chapter in the whole shocking story of the strangling of the young mother of three children is being discussed by friends of the murdered woman.

That chapter was revealed by the state when it made known the motive it assigns for the two persons it accuses—Mrs. Isabel J. Parker, the sixty-nine-year-old widow and boarding house keeper, and George Long, the thirty-nine-year-old teamster and ex-lumberman, in the house kept by the aged defendant on South Main street, where the young mother was last seen alive on the night before her nude body was found in the center of the city's business district.

SOUGHT TO END DOUBLE LIFE.

In this chapter Mrs. Broadwell is depicted as a repentant Magdalen, for the State contends that Mrs. Broadwell had determined to cease all relations she is alleged to have had with George Long and that the small but powerful ex-lumberman choked her to death when she declared her intentions to end the double life she is supposed to have led, following her threats to expose both him and Mrs. Parker for detaining her in the house by force.

That while Mrs. Broadwell accepted the invitation of Mrs. Parker to call at the latter's home on the night of May 2, it was with the purpose of renouncing her supposed double life and of making it plain to those with whom she had consorted that she had reformed.

PURPOSE SINCERE.

That Mrs. Broadwell was actuated in her purpose by a sincere desire to fulfil her duties as a mother to her trio of beautiful children, the oldest of whom was seven years and all of whom were growing as rapidly as to demand more and more of her time in care and education.

That calculing and every other form of persuasion, however enticing it may have been, failed to sway the young mother from her decision and that not even the prospect of what could move her to go back to the devious pleasures of the double life is on other words, Mrs. Broadwell died a martyr, completely absolved from any sins she may have committed in the past.

When J. Ward Carver, attorney for Mrs. Parker and George Long, withdrew his objections to the plea of State Attorney Davis to Judge E. L. Scott in the Barre Court, the case against the pair was virtually closed until it will be opened by the State again on June 2 before a special session of the grand jury.

On complaint of Alderman Mulkerin, Raymond was arrested near Clarendon Hill in West Somerville. About $40 on his person was turned over to Alderman Mulkerin.

PLANT FACTORY STRIKE BRINGS SHUTDOWN

Strikers Get Their Weekly Pay; 1,500 Operatives Are Now Out

The Wilmot & Hunt shoe factory in Rockland was shut down today, owing to the strike of more than 1,500 operatives, the clerical employes remaining at work.

The factory will re-open Monday, it is stated, if enough operatives report to make it possible to run the machinery.

No explanation of the temporary shutdown was given by the company officials, but the strikers believe they know the reason. It is customary to pay the employes Saturday noontime, instead of which those remaining at work received their weekly pay checks last night. This was done, it is said, to prevent agitation by the strikers among those still employed.

The strikers were paid today, and this was accomplished without any disorder. They were not asked to surrender their union identification discs and are still regarded as being employed by the factory heads.

There will be a meeting of this meeting of strikers on a lot on Mozart and Bolster streets to discuss Plain to-day, it is said, that the cutters would walk out Monday, leaving only cutters makers and welters at their benches.

Grover Barker, a delegate from Local No. 2 of the Boot and Shoe Workers of Lynn, has taken charge of the strike.

MILLEN OFFERS SERVICES.

J. Walter Mallen of the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation conferred with Barker and later talked with President William J. Metiaffer and other officials of the company, with a view, it is said, to offering the services of the board as mediator in the labor trouble.

It is understood strike leaders that President Metiaffer has refused to confer with Barker or any other union officials.

His argument is that the company has an agreement with each of its employes under which any differences shall be settled individually with the employe, and the company is ready to stand by that agreement at all times. If, however, refused to settle with any union or any official of a union, who is not an employe.

STRIKE IS ORDERLY.

The strike thus far has been conducted without any disturbance of disorder.

The strikers hold meetings at the headquarters in Columbus Hall, Jackson square Roxbury, where the report of the picket captain is given and other information on the strike.

They have applied for a permit to parade but as yet have not received any action on the application.

Engineers Strike May Throw 50,000 Out of Work in New Bedford

New Bedford, May 17. — An ultimatum that unless they are granted a wage increase before Monday they will remain out on strike on that day was handed to the Manufacturers Association here today by the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers.

Should the manufacturers refuse the demand every industrial plant in the city will be affected, and it is estimated that 50,000 people will be thrown out of work.

The union demands $42 per week for those in charge of first class plants and $37 per week for junior engineers. In all continuous running plants eight hours shall constitute a day's work. Time and a half is demanded for overtime and six days shall constitute a week's work. Extra pay is demanded for holidays.

300 OUT AT AETNA MILLS, WATERTOWN

About three hundred workers of the Aetna Woolen Mills, Watertown, are on strike today as the result of labor troubles which started Monday. Company officials refused to answer the charge or to make any statement. Today the plant was not running.

STILLS IN HOME RISKY, SAYS COLLECTOR

Heavy Penalties for Those Who Try to Beat the Prohibition Law After July 1

Have you a little still in your home?

If you have, get rid of it at once, or the revenue man will get you.

Furthermore, if you have any intention of setting up a home-made still after July 1, forget it, for Collector of Internal Revenue John F. Malley says heavy penalties may be levied on you.

In other words, according to the latest rulings from Washington, prohibition will really prohibit, in the homes as well as in the streets. A man's home may be his castle, but it can't be a speak-easy, according to the authorities, and ignorance of the law does not excuse the guilty.

Collector Malley has made public regulations which provide, among other things:

HEAVY FINES.

"To set up a liquor still in your own home or anywhere without first registering it with the Bureau of Internal Revenue is a serious offence, carrying with it a penalty of five years' fine or imprisonment or both and the forfeiture of the still and all the personal property of the offender found in the building or in the premises where the still was seized.

"To make a mash from which alcohol may be distilled is punishable by a fine of not less than $500 or imprisonment or both.

IGNORANCE NO EXCUSE.

Collector Malley warns those intending to brew or still any beverage that may ferment into alcohol that ignorance of the new regulations will not excuse an offender.

Collector Malley has a specially trained force of deputies on duty at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Little Building. He announces he will give freely of their time and advice to persons unfamiliar with the prohibition laws, and that failure to obtain a fine or imprisonment may be avoided by those who apply before they brew certain beverages in the home.

It is further stated that a number of persons are victims of the alleged schemes, although as yet no charges have been preferred in that regard. It is said that a letter was sent to C. H. Greene, 1 Oakland street, Medford asking him to join the club.

According to the clubs literature, it is a national organization with headquarters in Boston. Fees for individual members are $2 a year, for chauffer members, $1, for life members, $15, and for garages and hotels, $5. Large classified signs for hotels and monthly signs for individuals, including the cars have been contracted for, according to the authorities, the large signs to cost $40 each, the hotel signs $10, and the smaller ones to cost 15 cents each and sold for $2.50.

Some scrapper for the navy!

Stripes the old woman'll certainly pop her eyes when I get into Lowell, Mass. Five years—I know once a career I was in that time—and maybe four or five of 'em I was at sea. Some one will have to tell me.

Young Cronin, fine, sturdy American as an oriental war. It actually put over on the American navy officers and the British navy officers and the gallant colonel of the Twenty-fifth Regiment.

But I have to begin at the beginning. I suppose I was a kid when I first got back to Lowell and went to work in the mills. I remember I was working in the carding room. I was there two years and a half, I guess, and I got tired of it. I had to have a man with.

Wandering under the constellations of the Pleiades and the Southern Cross, taken indigenous for the deck young Cronin enlisted in the navy.

He shipped out on the Leviathan. He was stationed on the transport. He was there until he was sent to Ireland. He was on the Leviathan when she was torpedoed. He was in the water for hours and then picked up by a destroyer. He was on the Leviathan when she was torpedoed again. He was in the water for hours and then picked up by a destroyer and then the Leviathan and then the Ede, and then the Leviathan and then the Ede, and then the Leviathan and then the Ede, after escorting battle ship after battle ship in the North Sea. Sometimes we were smashed.

When I got out of the London hospital I enlisted in the Scots Lowlanders Regiment, and in the summer of 1915 I was in the Dardanelles. When the barrage lifted one morning in July we went over, but I got a bullet in my leg and was shipped me, and I woke up in the Lazaretto below Prince Rupert in East Prussia. Some one had given me a drink of some chlorine gas which we attacked, and I was used for base weeks.

"BUILD NOW" PANACEA FOR PRESENT ILLS, DECLARES ARCHITECT

MATERIALS' COST TO BE NO LOWER

Investors Assured of Ready Return on Capital, Says G. H. Desmond

"Get to building! Build Now! Build before prices go any higher as they are likely to go. The people would do well to go to bed tonight and waken up tomorrow to think in new prices."

This is the statement to the Boston American by G. Henry Desmond, head of the firm of Desmond & Lord, architects, with Boston offices at No. 15 Beacon street.

Mr. Desmond, among other things, designed Base Hospital No. 10 on Parker Hill, the recently completed $1,000,000 high school in Portland, the Capital at Augusta, Me., the new Hamilton Trust Company building on Washington street. His firm also age the architects of the new Charles Street Jail, the bonds for which were signed yesterday by Mayor Peters.

But apart from their business operations, Mr. Desmond is clearly in a position to advise the people to build now, for he has made a study of the evidence of his own near Boston.

"I am very much interested in the housing problem," said Mr. Desmond, "and I am glad to see that the Boston American is making such a splendid 'Build Now' campaign. If there is one thing that will help the movement to the people it is good housing. We are at present hopelessly lacking in adequate building accommodations and the sooner we start to build the better it will be for the individual and for the community as a whole.

"More buildings and better buildings will go far toward civic betterment," he added. "I do not think there could be any better post-war tonic than a big building boom.

REASONS FOR BUILDING.

"You may be sure that we are not going to get labor so low in the next five years as it has been, and that is one reason why we should build now. Then again, building materials will undoubtedly remain as high as they are today for years to come. Take brick, cement and all other kinds of building materials—there has not been any call for any of these things since the government took over control of them. But the demand for them now is growing, and with the demand and the competition they are likely to go higher.

"Every contractor on the other hand, is doing his utmost to hold his organization together and is willing to accept at this time a small margin of three or four per cent profit while in pre-war times he was glad to get fifteen per cent.

"We are paying $20 a thousand for common brick today while a few years ago the same brick cost $12 per thousand. But we simply must have this brick and gladly pay the price for it. It is unfortunate that so great many men hesitate to pay present prices for brick and other building materials and remain at a standstill in their business because they have been accustomed to a purchase at a lower price.

RENT INCREASES.

Mr. Desmond is one of many who believe rents also will go up and that those who build now will, therefore, have a considerable return from their investments in office buildings.

"One of the reasons why rents have not gone up to figures higher than the present is because there is a great many two and three-year leases set unexpired. So also in building new apartment houses and hotels there must be increased rents to compensate for other things which have not increased greatly, and when we look into the situation we can see but one thing that is a great deal to be said on the landlord's side, with everything costing more."

Mr. Desmond believes that the government would do well to begin work on public buildings. He does not think that road building should be commenced on a large scale until work on buildings is well under way.

AS TO ROAD BUILDING.

"Speaking of road building, I think it is a great proposition but I do not think that road building covers enough to take care of the various trades now unemployed," he said. "Road building gives the laborers and concrete workers, but it does not take in fifteen other trades necessary in the construction of buildings. The country has not been flooded with laborers but we can safely say that nearly the same number of the skilled men we had four years ago. So I believe the government should begin to build good community houses. One of the best things the government could do would be to build community sections on the plan of the English garden suburbs of today.

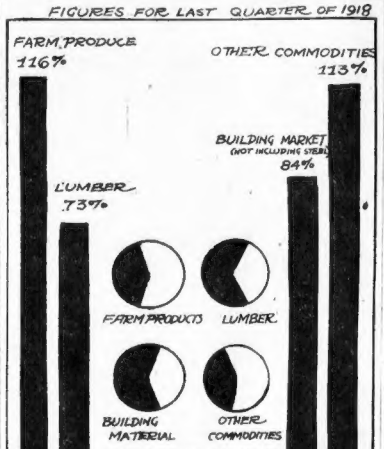
Mr. Desmond is of the opinion that the government could and should build community centres of attractive homes, and that the investment would be a good one. By this the construction of attractive homes—"houses for people to live in"—would be a boon and would greatly tend toward ending the unrest that agitates labor and the middle classes.

STRONG FOR "BUILD NOW."

He does not think the chances too rosy for the immediate construction of large numbers of greatly needed business buildings in Boston and other cities, because he feels that the mercantile interests will sit back to see what the Federal, State and city governments are going to do.

But, in the meantime, Mr. Desmond feels that the present is an opportune time in which to build, and his advice to those who have the money and a disposition to build is to "build now."

BUILDING MATERIALS' RISE RELATIVELY SMALL



Comparison of rise in the cost of building materials and other commodities as shown in the chart is taken from a report of Thomas S. Holden, investigator in the economics section, Division of Public Works and Construction, of the United States Department of Labor. Figures for the first quarter of 1919 are relatively the same as in the last quarter of 1918, covered in the chart. Costs of lumber and building material and also steel remain considerably lower than farm produce and general commodities, but there are indications of rising market in building materials, steel and lumber.

Optimism of "Build Now" Is Praised by Walsh

Editor of the American—The Boston American's "Build Now" campaign deserves the co-operation of all who are interested in restoring business and industry to a stable condition.

The business spirit needed in America today is not unlike that spirit manifested by our soldiers fighting in France, namely, confidence, aggression and optimism. We never could have won the war if our soldiers had been pessimistic or doubted their capacity to fight the enemy and their ability to win.

We need the winning spirit of our returning heroes here at home in reconstructing and readjusting business conditions in America.

The "Build Now" campaign should stir all our people—the investor, real estate man, home owner, building contractor, manufacturer and banker—to a realization of their opportunity to be of real service to America at this time in helping to solve the unemployment problem, put money into circulation and make for general prosperity. DAVID I. WALSH.

STRIKE OF 30,000 PUTS WINNIPEG IN ISOLATION

Winnipeg, Man., May 17.—Winnipeg is virtually isolated today as the result of action of press, broker and commercial telegraphers in joining the general strike which has paralyzed industries here.

More than 30,000 men holding membership in eighty unions, have gone on strike.

Brigadier-General D. H. Ketchen, commanding officer at Military District No. 10, has announced that the Decoration Day parade planned for Sunday will not be permitted because of the strike. All troops in Winnipeg have been ordered to report for duty.

The city is without newspapers, street car service, telephone service or mail deliveries. Department stores are closed and many other industries have shut down.

Employers and the strikers are deadlocked and no settlement of the strike is in prospect. The strikers are demanding recognition of the unions and employers are flatly refused to grant the demand.

NOTED SPEAKERS IN SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Campaign Opens Sunday Afternoon With Big Mass Meeting in Tremont Temple

The Salvation Army campaign for funds opens tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock with a mass meeting in Tremont Temple.

From that moment until May 26 all citizens co-operating, the Salvation Army will push its drive to raise $400,000 in Boston and $3,000,000 in New England.

The mass meeting in Tremont Temple, from all reports received at the campaign headquarters in the National Shawmut Bank Building, will be the greatest of its kind ever held.

The McIntyre sisters, who arrived in Boston this morning from New York, coming here to receive formally the citations they won for bravery under fire while serving in France with the Yankee Division, will speak.

Other speakers will include former Governor McCall, Mayor Peters, Major-General Edwards, who presented the sisters with their citations at a military ceremony on the Common this afternoon, Rear-Admiral Herbert Winslow Jones, Captain John Duke Lee, Rabbi Rollins and Abraham Nowak.

There will be music by the Salvation Army staff band and singing by Salvation Army lassies, a quartet of Y. D. men and Miss Clara Sexton, the widely known soprano. She will sing "Salvation Army Lassie of Mine."

An appeal to all Boston and New England citizens to help in the drive was received from Secretary of War Baker. It came in the form of a telegram to Colonel Adam Gifford, in charge of Salvation Army activities in New England.

RULES ALDERMEN RIGHT, ALSO MAYOR

Mayor Haines and the Medford Board of Aldermen broke 50-50 last night in their controversy, as to when and how it is proper for the city's chief executive to send communications to the board.

Last week the board refused to receive several communications sent them by Mayor Haines and which arrived at the aldermanic chamber at 7.52 p. m. The board asserted that by provision of the city charter all communications from the Mayor must be in hand by 7 o'clock in the afternoon. Solicitor York ruled that the Mayor was right in sending communications at any time he deemed necessary and that the board were also right in adhering strictly to the city charter's provisions.

ARREST FOUR ON EXPRESS THEFT CHARGE

Employes of Government's Arch Street Office Accused of $10,000 Robbery

Four men were arrested today charged with the larceny of merchandise valued at $10,000 from the American Railways Express Company, conducted by the United States government. Three of them were employes at the express office, No. 108 Arch street.

The men were arraigned in Municipal Court today and will be held for the grand jury. The police of City Hall avenue station, who made the arrest, say that the thefts have been going on for four months and that the expressmen brazenly used the wagons of the company to carry away their loot.

After a search beginning late yesterday, Special Officers Welch and Hunting of the City Hall avenue station recovered $3,000 worth of the stolen goods and also a stolen Ford automobile.

The men arrested, charged with larceny, are John H. Jenkins, twenty-three, of D street, South Boston; Mario Cassava, seventeen, of Claremont street, Somerville, and James M. Costello, twenty-two, of Fayette street, all drivers or drivers' assistants, through Prescott's mott, thirty-seven, of Calendar street, Roxbury. Prescott is also believed to have been the "fence" for the express thieves, and a charge to this effect will probably be lodged against him. It was at this address that most of the $3,000 worth of merchandise was found.

The police think that practically all the loot passed through Prescott's hands and that he was disposing of it as rapidly as possible. Hundreds of Boston business men and private individuals made complaints of shipments gone astray before the authorities got on the trail of the alleged thieves.

The automobile confiscated by the authorities is numbered Massachusetts No. 133185, and search is being made for the owner.

ASK TOLERANCE FOR AMERICANS, FOREIGN BORN

More kindly tolerance for the foreign-born American by the native-born is necessary if the former is to be assimilated and not become a problem here, according to a leaflet issued by the Massachusetts Bureau of Immigration.

Bernard J. Rothwell, chairman of the bureau, has asked the Boston American to print the leaflet to help in the work of Americanization.

Native Americans are appealed to in the following terms:

"Your foreign-speaking neighbors desire our friendship. We desire to assimilate them. Don't make foreigners in a strange land feel at home; that we want them to share our institutions and not become a foreign speaking land.

"Help make America united by special courtesy and patience in your daily contact with all those who do not speak our language readily. Many of these are well-educated in their native tongue. They keenly appreciate courtesy and kindness.

"Help make America, its institutions and Americans the finest so that they, too, will become steadfast Americans. This for your country—it is patriotic work.

SIX QUALIFY FOR HUB POSTMASTER

The examiners for the United States Civil Service Commission, who have been investigating the qualifications of candidates for appointment as postmaster of Boston, have finished their work and departed for Washington. Each of half a dozen men is confident he has landed the biggest federal plum in New England.

It is understood that a very small percentage of the thirty-nine applicants who "signed up" for the place were seriously considered, for most of them lacked the ability to qualify under rule requiring seven years' experience in an executive position. There is expectation that the appointment will be made within two or three weeks.

Who's Who in the 26th Division

Colonel Robert E. Goodwin, who recently returned from France in command of the 101st Field Artillery, of which he was commissioned colonel October 26, 1918, was born in Cambridge, Mass., October 27, 1878. For the past thirty-four years he has lived in Concord, Mass. He is unmarried and practices law in Boston.

The colonel enlisted in Battery A, Field Artillery M. V. M., in August, 1904, remaining until February, 1916, when he resigned, having advanced from private to first lieutenant. In March, 1916, he accepted a commission as captain in the newly formed Massachusetts Field Artillery Regiment, and assumed the duties of regimental quartermaster, in which capacity he went to the Mexican border in June, 1916.

The 102d U. S. Field Artillery sailed for France September 21, 1917, and after a three months' training went into the line in the Chemin des Dames sector the first week in February, 1918. After several weeks of service in this sector the regiment moved to the Toul sector, remaining there until the latter part of June, 1918. During this period he commanded the First Battalion and participated in the battles of Seicheprey and Xivray.

On May 29, 1918, he was commissioned lieutenant-colonel and assigned to duty with the 102d Field Artillery, and on July 5, 1918, was transferred to the 101st Field Artillery. The regiment with the other units of the 26th Division participated in the

The regiment took part in the St. Mihiel offensive, September 12-13, 1918. Following the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient the 26th Division reorganized the sector known as the Troyon sector, the 101st supporting the 51st Infantry Brigade. It was actively engaged in the battle of Marcheville, September 26.

QUICK REPEAL OF LUXURY TAXES PROMISED

Washington, May 17.—Speedy repeal of the luxury taxes the American people are now paying was promised today by Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, who ranks second in the membership of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Moore, who is one of the chief lieutenants of Representative Mann of Illinois, who is expected to retain his leadership of the Republican organization in the House, said that as soon as the House met on Monday at noon he would introduce a resolution calling for the repeal of that section of the revenue bill embodying the luxury taxes.

Republican leaders of the Senate declared that the luxury taxes should be at once wiped out and their repeal was, therefore, regarded as certain to be one of the first accomplishments of the Sixty-sixth Congress.

ATTRACTIONS AT THEATRES IN BOSTON

GLOBE THEATRE

Two photoplay bills of exceptional promise are announced at Loew's Globe Theatre through the week. The first half there will be given the first showings of the screen version of Hall Caine's famous novel, "The Woman They Gavest Me." None of the famous novelist's writings created such widespread discussion and interest as this story of a marital tangle. His stories have all been notable for their grasp of big subjects, which, handled with the masterly skill that placed him in the foremost rank of English men of letters, have increased their impressment, and in this he may be said to have written the most sensational of all his works. The screen version should by this take on first importance, and it should provide a photoplay that merits long life.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

The coming six days at the Columbia Theatre will have a group of photoplay bills that should find appeal with the patrons of this popular house, where the programs are changed daily. Each day's program consists of two full length photoplays, news pictures and comedies, making a show that at the price charged makes most reasonable entertainment.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Manager Joe Hurtig presents his famous Bowery Burlesquers as the next attraction at Waldron's Casino, in an entertainment and with a cast which are certain to give the greatest satisfaction to local lovers of burlesque shows. In the first place the company is headed by those two local favorites, funny Billy Foster and eccentric Frank Harcourt.

Rinse with tepid water, dry gently and dust on a few grains of Cuticura Talcum Powder, a delicate fascinating fragrance. Everywhere 25c. each.

IF ALL MOTHERS ONLY KNEW!

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms and Their Mothers Do Not Know What the Trouble Is.

Signs of worms are: Deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional griping and pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, restless nights, itching of the rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red pimples sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

Mrs. H. N. Roberts, 502 Asylum Street, Flint, Mich., used Dr. True's Elixir for her little baby girl when she was sick. Mrs. Roberts wrote to Dr. True: "My little girl is relieved of her worms." And in a later letter wrote: "Baby is fine and I think it was your medicine (Dr. True's Elixir) that helped her." If your baby is ill start giving Dr. True's Elixir at once. Write us freely about the case. No charge for correspondence. Buy Dr. True's Elixir at your drug store at once. Dr. J. F. True & Co., Auburn, Maine.—Advertisement.

EASTERN STEAMSHIP SUMMER TRAVEL

Summer travel on the Eastern Steamship lines has started off with what appears to be a sure promise of excellent patronage, if one is to judge by the rush of traffic on the lines thus far opened, during the past week. With the first "rush" of real Summer weather there was a decided increase on the trips between Boston and Portland, over the Portland division, and to St. John, N. B., on the St. John division, which offers the privilege of a stop-over at Eastport and Lubec. The Yarmouth division has been doing an ever-increasing business ever since the passenger traffic was resumed.

What is true of these several branches is true particularly of the Metropolitan arm of the service, between Boston and New York. There, with the advantage of daily passenger service, Sundays included, and the assurance of daylight sightseeing, with a view of the famous Cape Cod Canal, the patronage is such as to justify the management in their prediction that it would be enormous during June, July and August. The steamships Camden and Northland, assigned to this service, leave India Wharf every evening at 5 o'clock, and Pier 18 North River, New York, at the same hour, and are due at their destinations next morning at 8 o'clock.

JOE DI PESA'S CONCERT

The keenest interest is displayed by the hosts of friends of Joseph A. Di Pesa and Nicholas Penfield of the Park Square Theatre executive staff in the concert to be held at that theatre on Sunday evening, May 25, under the direction of the two gentlemen, who in turn promise a list of entertainers which will make this a memorable event in Sunday attractions. They announce that the major portion of the program will enlist leading artists from local theatres. From advance indications there is promise of a large audience which will tax the capacity of the Park Square on that evening. Seats are on sale at the box office of the theatre, and those who plan to attend are urged to make early application so as to assure good choice of seats.

QUINN CONCERT

Thomas A. Quinn, a well known Cambridge tenor, will give a concert in Steinert Hall, Friday evening, May 23. He will have the assistance of Hazel Clark, violinist, who recently appeared with John O'Sullivan in Symphony Hall, and James Ecker, accompanist. Mr. Quinn will sing a program exhibiting his versatility since it ranges from Puccini through Kathleen to Irish melodies. Miss Clark will play three groups of violin pieces.

CONDIT'S

Condit's ball room at Revere Beach is now open for dancing every evening. On next Tuesday evening will occur the fifth annual diamond ring competition.

MUSICAL SHOWS CROWD INTO BOSTON

Fortune Gallo is as well named as the late "Lucky" Baldwin. Fortune smiles from ear to ear for him. He is the only operatic impresario I ever heard of who kept a company on the road for half a dozen years, stayed out of jail and made money.

Gallo's San Carlo opera company starts out every September and stays out until June. It plays grand opera over more territory than the Bolsheviki now roam over. Gallo has a secret efficiency system for operating grand opera and handling artistic temperament, which would be worth millions to the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Now he has embarked upon a new venture. He found a co-operative association Gilbert and Sullivan troupe operating in Brooklyn, took them under his wing and sends them to Boston to perform the old operettas. This company did such a good job with Gilbert and Sullivan in Brooklyn that a lot of New York music lovers were in the habit of braving the subway under the river for the privilege of hearing them.

Gilbert and Sullivan did their best work in the eighties, which makes their operas between thirty and forty years of age, right in their prime. The engagement opens with "The Mikado," and for the last half of the week "Pirates of Penzance" is scheduled. If Boston is friendly other works will follow.

Blossom's Last Work.

High hopes are being set by the Selwyns upon "Among the Girls," the big musical comedy which opens at the Park Square Monday evening. The lyrics are the posthumous work of Henry Blossom, one of the greatest writers of libretton this country has ever known.

Mr. Blossom's activities extend over a generation and include the words of a score of the most popular of American comic operas.

In "Among the Girls," he had splendid material to work upon, for the piece was Rob Cooper Megrue's "Seven Chances," a farce comedy which started most auspiciously last season and succumbed to war conditions. The Selwyns have planted Percival Knight and Dennan Maley, last here in "The Kiss Burglar," in the cast and have selected the other principals and chorus with especial care.

A number of very attractive Boston girls have been chosen by an unusual method to lend color to the chorus of "Among the Girls."

Jolson Breaks Into Concert.

One of the things I like about Al Jolson is his willingness to give himself to his audience. His really astounding success hasn't turned his head. He doesn't sneer at the folk out front as soon as he is in the wings, and he doesn't treat an encore as an impudition. I have heard performers who would become profane when an audience insisted upon their repeating a song two or three times. How much more profane they would be if they didn't get that encore.

Jolson warms up to a friendly audience and gives them everything he owns. When they are with him he frequently neglects to go off the stage. Last season he was wont to appear at Winter Garden Sunday night concerts. His turn was two minutes, and there were other acts waiting. But when Jolson found things to his liking he just strayed out front and talked and sang until more than an hour had passed and the waiting acts were sent home without appearing.

That's why I have no doubt whatever that the Jolson song recital tomorrow will be a huge success. Jolson at his worst is fun in him and a big audience will get it out.

Personally I don't care for his ragged ragtime stuff, but Jolson can almost reconcile me to it. It is his terrific energy, his enthusiasm and his personal magnetism which make indifferent Tin Pan Alley productions popular all over the country. Someday he will get something really worth while, something I would like to hear him recite "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight." I'll bet he could put it over.

"From the Tomb a Doleful Sound."

Imagine a pallid, cadaverous Tombes trying to get a job as a comedian. That is just what Andrew Tombes of "Flo Flo" has succeeded in doing. Mr. Tombes doesn't look unlike an undertaker, but those in the trade will tell you that undertakers are jolly fellows behind the mask, and make a merry quip and waggish jest while they are at their employment of fitting number nine bodies into number eights.

Be that as it may, as George Munro used to say, by the ways, where is George? But to get back to Andrew Tombes has a droll way with him that suggests Richard Carle as we used to see him when he was a partner of the "Bride Shop" he gets large quantities of laughter out of reluctant audiences.

Tombes has been specializing in vaudeville for some months and has almost unknown to legitimate theatre audiences.

And have you ever noticed what a vast difference there is between vaudeville and legit audiences. Apparently people who patronize the first-class houses rarely go to vaudeville, while the vaudeville audiences are just as exclusive. Thus a great vaudeville favorite can go into musical comedy, give his entire vaudeville act, in a city where he has played the big time a score of occasions, and have the act go over with the musical comedy folk as though it were brand new.

Once in a while you hear somebody say, "Oh, I seen him in vaudeville," but such traveled customers are few.

Fisher Invents.

Irving Fisher, leading man with Nora Bayes in "Ladies First," at the Wilbur, was born in Cincinnati and is a graduate of the Ohio State University. He made his debut on the stage in 1916 in "The century Girl" at the Century Theatre, New York, playing opposite Hazel Dawn.

Mr. Fisher has a well-rounded tenor voice and has studied music for many years. He is the author of several of the song numbers used in "Ladies First," having written both the words and the music. "Without You," "Four Little Men" and "All My Life," three of the song hits in the Nora Bayes show, are all credited to him.

By his activities on both the artistic and mechanical side he has upset an old college tradition, which is to the effect that the artistic and mechanical will not mix. Mr. Fisher has proven this tradition to be without foundation, and Uncle Sam has furnished the proof in the shape of copyrights on songs and in granting him patents on his inventions.

Nora Bayes really discovered Mr. Fisher and his pleasing tenor voice. He was singing in "The Century Girl" when she was in search of a singing partner for a show that she owned and managed, called "Two Hours of Song." That was the show that gave Nora the managerial microbe. She made money with that, and now she has gone after managerial laurels on a larger scale by backing and starring in "Ladies First."

"Between Dark and Daylight."

If Florence Rockwell, the exceedingly atmospheric Luana of "The Bird of Paradise," at the Majestic Theatre, had recited "The Children's Hour" at just the proper moment when she was a wee girl she probably never would have become an actress. "That was years ago, when I was a tiddie at St. Louis, and James O'Neil, then a well-known actor, was a frequent visitor at our home. He had been visiting us for some time, when one day someone wished me on him with a recitation," explains Miss Rockwell.

"I started off nervously, and for a minute an indulgent smile came over the face of the actor, as if to say, 'Some old infant prodigy,' now I wish she would stop.'

"But this smile aroused sort of desperation in me and I put everything I had in the remaining verses. Real interest succeeded the tolerant smile, and when I had finished Mr. O'Neil remarked that I had it in me to do things in a dramatic way. On the strength of his encouragement I fitted myself for a stage career, and a few years later was engaged by him for his company. Later on I advanced to be his leading woman in all his Shakespearean revivals."

Censorship Still On.

For the past two years almost anybody felt qualified to censor newspapers, movies and theatres generally, and I suppose the Y. M. C. A. feels that it is only in fashion when its officials try to stuff any adverse comment into its work abroad.

There are a number of soldier acts in vaudeville and musical comedy, that who have been at the front and who are using their living to tell their experiences to audiences. Some of them may have repeated the gags popular in the army regarding the Y. M. C. A. canteen hot stories which didn't boost the big organization much.

In such cases Y. M. C. A. officials haven't hesitated to write to theatrical managers, warning them in no uncertain tone that these performers refrain from making such "ridiculous, untruths" they usually put it.

Now I don't presume to line up on one side or the other on this question, there are a couple of million boys who saw the Y. M. C. A. and who can testify whether they appreciated it or not, but I don't think any private organization has a right to prevent free speech to the theatre or elsewhere. The courts are open to the Y. M. C. A. to prosecute men who may be libelling the organization, and they should follow legal channels instead of trying to work upon the fears of theatrical managers.

It is important to note that on letters have been written by officials of the Salvation Army, the K. C., or the Hebrew organization that vaudeville performers be prevented from talking about their organizations.

She Sparkles Off the Stage.

Laurette Taylor is engaged by her press agent with the following quips, epigrams and witticisms. He says she could qualify as a newspaper paragrapher if she lost her job as a star. The play is "Happiness," in which she is appearing at the Hollis Street Theatre. J. Harriet Manners, is the husband of Laurette Taylor, but he lays his hand on a stack of Bibles and swears that he doesn't supply his wife's epigrams to use upon the stage.

In the course of a conversation she remarked:

"The Kaiser's love for a place in the sun is a small thing compared to an actresses' love for a place in the newspapers."

"I am sure that God favors the humans who keep Him wondering which way they are going to jump."

"My friend Lyan Fontaine is real British in her attitude towards people. She seems to think that not only is their home their castle, but their souls their own."

"So and So has an impudent mind that says what it thinks and then counts ten."

They Won't Like This.

The full title of the Copley Theatre is Copley Repertory Theatre. Don't confuse it with a stock company, and don't mention the leading man or the leading woman, for there "ain't no such animals." The Copley is a sort of Bolshevik theatre, the whole company forms a "soviet," and the usual autocratic arrangement of a theatrical company in which the star is despotic has been entirely abolished.

The actor who plays the lead this week will appear as a butler next week, the heroine of one week is the old lady of the following one. I have a suspicion that Henry Jewett has the powers of Lenine and Trotzky rolled into one, but I may be wrong.

He's a Good Actor.

Mark Elliston of the Arlington Theatre Stock company used to be a ballplayer, and he left the diamond some years ago to go on the stage. His first engagement lasted six weeks, and he got his first week's salary for it, and when he quit and went home he thought it was for good. But it wasn't. The ambition for the stage was in his blood and he has been selling ever since. Once in a while, especially when he finds plenty of work to do, he's a pretty tough on an actor who is also a baseball fan," he said recently. "To play a matinee every day and to have a big league game going on somewhere else, and not be able to attend it. But then, it's all in the day's work. Perhaps when the Summertime comes I'll be able to see all I want, and that means every game in the east where I happen to be.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE

Selwyn and company will offer for the first time in Boston their 1919 musical comedy extravaganza, "Among the Girls," at the Park Square Theatre Monday evening. The book is by Rob Cooper Megrue and Henry Blossom, the lyrics by Mr. Blossom and the music by Raymond Hubbell. The play is founded on the misadventures of a bashful young man. He suddenly learns that the large fortune he has been confidently expecting may not be his after all. A secret he has to take unto himself a wife, and he has but a few hours in which to do so. The problem would be difficult for any one. But for a young man afflicted with a super-bashful nature it is appalling. His desperate efforts to persuade young ladies of his acquaintance to forgo upon his frantic proposals with seriousness are, to say the least, ludicrous. Mr Selwyn has chosen such prominent players as Percival Knight, Dennan Maley, Karl Benham, Evelyn Cavanaugh, Coraline Wade, Reed Dalling, Beverly West, George A. Wright, Jr., Edith Burton, Florence Deshon and others and a chorus of beautiful that stands quite in a class by itself.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

Music-loving Boston and environs, with its dearth of music-drama, opera comique and comic opera this season, will unquestionably welcome the Gilbert and Sullivan productions at the Plymouth Theatre this week and next. Mr. Fortune Gallo, the well-known New York impresario, whose artists are now singing at, or have just closed an extended engagement at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, will bring the productions here complete, with an organization of one hundred people.

Noteworthy features of this all-star combination are a large and highly-efficient choral section and a superb symphonic orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Max Hendix. The fortnight of songs will open Monday night with a splendid production of "The Mikado" which will be sung on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Thursday matinee. That evening, however, the bill will be changed, "The Pirates of Penzance" being scheduled for the last half of the week. It is understood the second week and will be devoted to "The Gondoliers" and "H. M. S. Pinafore."

The company includes Miss Mary Moulan, the comedian; Warren Proctor, the lyric tenor; Mr. William Danforth, bass-baritone; Mr. James Goddard, well-known grand opera bassо; Mr. Bertram Peacock, baritone; Blanche Duffield, pianо; Gladys Caldwell, soprano; Miss Sylvia Tell, premier danseuse from the Chicago Opera Company; Miss Ethel Castles, soprano; Mr. John Willard, baritone, and Gloria Hughes.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Alice Eis and company will receive a welcome return to Keith's next week as the headliners. In the act included James Templeton in a series of new songs and dances. Miss Eis, Mack and company will offer several Broadway's favorite musical comedies. "A Pair of Tickets" Jack Wilson and Sammy Lee have a new song and dance production, Leighton and Alexander offer their latest conception of stories, Jane Courthope and company, Fred Berrens in "Words and Music," Emerson and Baldwin, Doyle Brothers and George Whiting and Sadie Burt are others on the bill. The last-named team are comedians par excellence.

SELLS-FLOTO CIRCUS

The circus commercially celebrated in Boston, but very well known in the West will open the season in this city which is dividing here a week from tomorrow and moves to the Huntington grounds.

It is the Sells-Floto circus one of the largest organizations now touring under a tent. It contains a complete equipment, including menagerie, employs many hundreds of persons and gives a five-ring show which is second to none.

One of the features of Sells-Floto parades in Snyder the Tusco which is declared to be the largest elephant in the world since the killing of the Hagenbeck beasts in the great fire at Hamburg.

Last year Snyder was ridden in a Liberty Loan parade at Little Rock, Arkansas, by former Vice-President Fairbanks.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Next Saturday at 10 a. m. Norumbega Park will begin its season which gives promise of surpassing in every respect any preceeding year. The management are sparing no expense to make this the most popular resort in New England. Catering at all times to ladies and children, the opening day will be children's day, when all school children will be admitted to the park and theatre free until 6 p. m.

The Liberty Players, retaining much of its former personnell, will again present all the best available plays. The first offering, which will continue throughout the following week, with daily matinees, will be Kaw and Erlanger's big comedy success, "Here Comes the Bride," which will be remembered from the Hollis Theatre engagement of last season. Edna F. Simmons will once more wield the baton for the excellent lady orchestra, this year containing a number of soloists, which will give concerts twice daily, while a real jass band will creat the Norumbega "tickle tos," making dancing in the new ballroom more enjoyable than ever.

An added feature and one that is sure to become most popular, is the new athletic field, just completed, with every modern facility for all out-door games. Special indies' days are to be one of the features of this branch.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

An admirable bill, combined with vaudeville acts and photoplays, is announced for the first half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. Heading the variety will be the musical comedy in miniature, "Full of Pep," presented by a company of ten headed by Murray Leslie and Gus Stevenson. It is promised that the title is no misnomer and that the music, comedy, dances and young women of the chorus help preserve its definition. Others to appear are the Gorman brothers, gifted singers, in songs popular and otherwise; Wheeler and Potter in the novel concert comedy, "A Phonic Episode"; Knowles and Hurst in their comedy skit, "The Long and Short of It"; the Aerial La Vails, comedy aerialists. On the screen there will be shown the latest news pictures, a comedy and a screening of Hall Caine's powerful story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." This recent novel of the literary master created a profound impression and was provocative of much discussion, therefore its screen version should meet with ready response. The bill for the last half will include Catherine Crawford and her Fashion Girls, a spectacular costume and musical revue; Klug and Harvey; Lord and Fuller; Al Tyler, Harry Hines and the photoplay, "The Busher," picturing Charles Ray.

COPLEY THEATRE

"Chains," a comedy of English life of today, written by Elizabeth Baker, will be given at the Copley Repertory Theatre next Monday evening for the first time in Boston. It is brilliantly clever, vital and irresistibly true, full of humor, pathos and character, and it reveals an extraordinary technical skill on the part of its author. Its story involves a London clerk, intelligent, strenuous, jack of the deadly monotony of life between his cheap house at Hammersmith and his office, tempted to emigrate by the decision of a bachelor friend who is going to Australia. He longs to rent his fortune, to see the world, to "do something."

But in the end the humdrum wins. He has to stay in the little home at Hammersmith, but it is not a very dreadful fate. He has a little wife who loves him and who tries to make him happy. He has a patch of garden, and is saving up for a conservatory for his geraniums. There is just enough tragedy in his fate to give a serio-comic quality to the four acts of wholly delightful "rebellion."

The cast will include Noel Leslie as Charles Wilson and Phyllis Ralph as Lily Wilson, his wife; E. F. Clive as Freddy Tennant, Cameron Matthews as Morton Leslie, Donald Call as Percy Massey, H. Conway Wingfield as Mr. Massey, Fred W. Permain as Walter Foster, Jessamine Newcombe as Maggie Massey, Viola Roach as Mrs. Massey and Leonard Craske as Mr. Fenwick.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

The first Boston production of "Little Peggy O'Moore" at the Arlington Theatre next week will reveal a play that has been aptly called a second "Peg o' My Heart." "Little Peggy O'Moore" is a comedy-drama in four acts by Edward O'Shea and Edward J. Lilly. Wynn Pegge reaches America on her first trip from her native Ireland she is eager to see what kind of a man is the great Dan Murphy, her guardian, whom she has heard so much about, and whose fame has reached across the ocean. She is only a slip of a girl when she lands in America, but she falls in love with Dan Murphy at first sight, and the play is throughout a delightful mingling of romance and American politics.

For Dan Murphy is a real live Mayor of a real live American city. He has the good of his people at heart and he proves every inch a man when his political enemies make unfair attacks upon him.

The play is well constructed and it abounds in thrilling situations and clean, wholesome humor. The leading roles will be acted by Dudley Ayres and Ruth Robinson, with the entire stock company in the cast, and the production will be under personal direction of William C. Masson. It will be acted at the Arlington Theatre for only one week.

GRIFFITH REPERTORY

A distinct innovation will be offered in Boston on Wednesday evening, May 28, at the Colonial Theatre, when David Wark Griffith will inaugurate a spring season repertory which gives promise of many interesting and work-while features.

The new venture, an original idea with Mr. Griffith, will be known as the Griffith Players in a repertory of moving picture productions and diversions of the speaking stage.

D. W. Griffith, unquestionably the foremost producer of the picture world, has been conspicuous for many splendid ideas for proper advancement and dignity of the photoplay, but never has been advanced a more original and unique character of entertainment than that to be provided the theatre-going public of Boston on this occasion.

The initial of the Griffith repertory season at the Colonial will be "Broken Blossoms," an original romance based on Thomas Burke's "Limehouse Nights" and dealing particularly with the narratives of "The Chink and the Child" and "Twinkle Toes."

"Broken Blossoms" was the opening bill of the Griffith repertory season at the George M. Cohen Theatre, New York, last Tuesday night, scoring the greatest triumph in Mr. Griffith's career, and was most gloriously praised by every critic in the city.

Not only will Mr. Griffith present several of his most notable screen productions of the past, but a number of new features heretofore unseen.

NEW WALDORF THEATRE

Two bills of vaudeville and photoplay subjects announced for the week at the New Waldorf Theatre give promise of unusually good entertainment. For the first half of the week there will be presented a novel comedy and song spectacle, "The League of Nations," presented by a company of seven: Conlin and Glass in their skit, "A Fool and a Flirt"; J. Edward Lessig and company in the one-act comedy, "We-Us & Company;" Helen Harrington, singing comedienne; La Emma and Boyds, acrobats. On the screen there will be shown the latest news pictures, a comedy and Mary Boland in "A Woman's Experience." The change of bill Thursday will bring Gladys Dorothy Sheils in a dancing skit, "Danse Infernal"; Ohrien-Havel Company in songs and comedy; Jerome and Herbert; John F. Clarke; the Puppets and the photoplay, "Suspense," picturing Mollie King.

McISAAC says that

LAURETTE TAYLOR'S special charm is making the run of "Happiness" noteworthy at the Hollis, but the end of the engagement is in sight. It is one of the sweetest comedies of the season.

"THE BIRD OF PARADISE," Tully's apparently immortal drama of Hawaii, with its fascinating love story and exotic attractions, continues at the Majestic.

NORA BAYES, in "Ladies First," has turned Hoyt's "A Contented Woman" into a sort of personal vehicle. As Miss Bayes has more personality, a better voice and lots more brains than most actresses in musical comedy, the result is agreeable. Irving Fisher, a capable baritone, assists her. Wilbur.

AL JOLSON, in "Sinbad," pulls 'em up Huntington avenue and packs 'em in the Opera House with monotonous regularity. He was never in better form. This song recital of his tomorrow is creating lots of interest.

"LA LA, LUCILLE," at the Colonial, is a Broadway musical show in the making. Headed by Jack Hazzard, a stunning chorus and good principals, its future is evident. It has only one week more in Boston.

"FLO FLO," John Cort's spectacular and snappy musical entertainment, has surprised everybody by its drawing powers and staying qualities. I wouldn't be surprised if it could run far into the Summer. The Tremont is a cool theatre on a hot day.

"THE EYES OF THE WORLD," Clune's powerful and spectacular drama of life in the open, based upon Harold Bell Wright's novel, continues at the Shubert Theatre. Those who have seen it agree that it is an unusually effective film drama.

MODERN THEATRE

Carolyn Wells, among the elect in literature, will be represented on the screen at the Modern Theatre when throughout the week there will be given the first showings of Ethel Clayton in "Vicky Van." As a story, it appears to have far more substance than ordinarily come to the studio, and the writer shows her skill in construction of plot that bears her individuality. It concerns a young woman of slender means who marries an elderly man for the position and wealth that would be hers thereby. She endures a sad and disillusioning honeymoon, and later when she inherits a goodly fortune she keeps this from her husband and opens another house where she poses as another personage, changing her appearance to carry out the deception. This brings complications that are ingeniously contrived and leads to a very stirring climax. The other photoplay that shares the bill will show Tom Moore in "One of the Finest."

STAGE STARS HELP THE FUND FOR ACTORS

Players at Boston Theatres Contribute Generously to Fine Program

Favorites of plays now at Boston theatres, with song and dance and sketch and monologue, yesterday at the Colonial Theatre gave generously of their services for the annual benefit fund of the Actors' Fund of America.

A speech by the president, Daniel Frohman, the auctioning of an autographed programme, and an appeal by Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole, this last for support of the Salvation Army in the coming drive, were features apart from the dramatic offerings.

This season's programme was notable for its sketches. Among these were "The Dancing Master," "Nettie," a delicious comedy by George Ade, "Juliet in the Balcony," "Her Debut in Dubuque," and "Sarsaparilla."

MANY RECOGNIZE NETTIE.

A word about "Nettie" quite the most orientalist offering judged by literary standards. Nettie was the skilful lady of vaudeville necessary than refined, who had a suitor for each evening in the week and who had invented such suitor to present her with identical gifts of sable coats, grand pianos and diamond horses shown. "Who is Nettie?" asked the program, not naming the lady. There were some in the audience who recognized Nettie by her singular arm and winning smile. Sequel to the presentation, spoken of above-lovers met—and the secret was out for two of them.

A pleasant sketch, in that at last,

N. E. CONSERVATORY BENEFICENT SOCIETY

For the benefit of the fund of the New England Conservatory Beneficent Society which is loaned to deserving music students, a dance recital will be given under direction of Madame Betti Muschiette in Jordan Hall, June 2. This is one of the most alluring of the seasonal events at the conservatory, and a large sale of seats is already indicated. Among the special features which the young dancers will produce is the Masque of May, which was given at the Copley Society's May fete on May 1 last.

as not often, a melodrama was presented at which the audience might laugh, and were expected to laugh, was "Her Debut in Dubuque." She had quite a debut, as all in the audience agreed. Nora Bayes, who gave a travesty of the balcony scene in which a quite different Juliet smiles down, telephone in hand, at a quite different Romeo. Al Roberts, no less in a little curtain speech at the end remarked that at last she had attained her ambition—the part of Juliet. "And, if you were amused, I was a good Juliet," she finished.

The audience gave every indication of having been amused.

LAURETTE TAYLOR PLEASES.

The Hawaiian Singers, Laurette Taylor, childish, appealing, in the second act of "Happiness;" Irving Fisher, Al Jolson in song and monologue, his inimitable self and most entertaining, Carlotta Monterey, Ernest Glendinning, Donald Gallaher, Cyrus Wood, James B. Carson, John E. Hazard, Josephine Drake, these last two in a sketch anticipatory of prohibition times, "Sarsaparilla;" Stuart Barnes, "Sailor" Kelly, Marjorie Bentley, Grace Walsh, Jonathan Jaynes and chorus of the "La La Lucille" company, all entertained at the top of their bent, and all were warmly welcomed by the audience who loved them. There was something for every taste in the latest actors' benefit, whatever that taste might have been. The program was not finished till nearly 6 o'clock.

LEAH BAIRD IN VAMPIRE ROLE AT BOSTON

Shares Honors With Charles Richman and Pearl Shepard in "The Echo of Youth"

Leah Baird, beautiful screen vampire, shares honors with Charles Richman and Pearl Shepard in Ivan Abramson's stirring photodrama, "The Echo of Youth," which will be shown at the Boston Theatre the week of May 26.

The story in its development shows how she rekindles the fire of love in the heart of a man who had not seen her for a generation. How well she succeeds in playing the difficult role was attested to at the premiere of "The Echo of Youth," on Broadway, where a select audience just barely refrained from hissing the character she played but could not repress its approval and expressed itself in frequent salvos of applause.

In "The Echo of Youth," Miss Baird plays the role of a cabaret singer who has social ambition. Years later (in the story) she had transgressed against the law and sought the aid of a young attorney, who succeeded in having her acquitted and enchanted by her surpassing beauty, demands her heart and hand as his fee. Having nothing to lose the singer assents and they set a date for an early marriage.

The day before the wedding is to take place a slight misunderstanding arises which results in a serious quarrel and the young woman disappears.

A year later the young attorney reviews a demand for blackmail, which, because of his standing in the community, he dare not ignore. As a consequence he pays in silence, and as the years go on and he rises high in the world he still continues his payments until he can stand it no longer. But no sooner does he rebel than his nemesis comes to his very stronghold and in person demands even more than she had ever asked for—she wants his love—she wants him!

A stormy scene ensues in which is displayed such dramatic artistry that the most blase theatregoer finds a jump in his pulse.

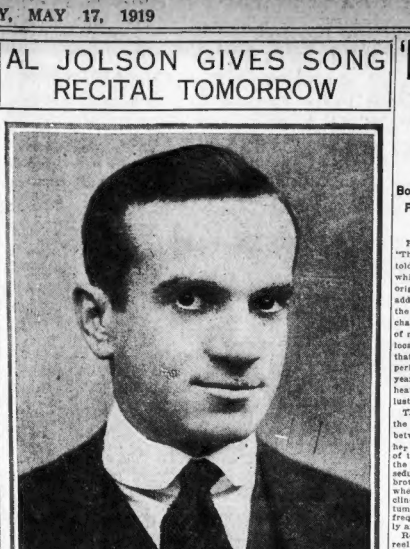
BEACON THEATRE

Ethel Clayton and Tom Moore are the stars of their new productions that will be unrolled for the first times at the Beacon Theatre through the week. Miss Clayton will be shown pictured in a story by Carolyn Wells, entitled "Vicky Van." There is much mystery in the chronicle of this strong screen passage, a bond of literary construction in which the writer is mistress. The central personage is a young woman married to a wealthy man for position, who becomes disillusioned upon her honeymoon, and later upon inheriting a large sum keeps knowledge of it to herself. She installs herself in a new establishment adjoining her home and is known by another name. From this outline there may be conjectured great possibilities, and the climax is said to be most stirring. Mr. Moore is to be shown in "One of the Finest," a comedy drama of Metropolitan life.

DUPONT MATINEE.

The success of the special matinees of Noh dances and Japanese dramas given by Miss Catherine Dupont at the Copley Theatre the Wednesday afternoon was so marked that a second matinee is announced for Wednesday afternoon, May 28. An entirely different program will be given in which Miss Dupont will interpret "Chitra" and other dramas of the Hindoo poet, Rabindranath Tagore. Miss Dupont will be assisted by Mr. Douglas Crane and by Miss Grace Conkle, who has been recently appearing in "Shakuntala" in New York.

AL JOLSON GIVES SONG RECITAL TOMORROW



Al Jolson, celebrated singer and comedian, to sing many popular melodies at Boston Opera House tomorrow night.

One of the most unique affairs in the history of theatricals will be the song recital given by Mr. Al Jolson at the Boston Opera House tomorrow night. This is the first song recital to be given on any stage in the United States by the celebrated singer and comedian.

Mr. Jolson will sing over a score of popular songs or more numbers which Mr. Jolson will sing are: "Where the Black-Eyed Susans Grow," "Rock-a-Bye Your Baby With a Dixie Melody," "There's a Lump of Sugar Down in Dixie," "Si Si Senor," "Don't Forget the Boys," "When I Leave the World Behind," "That Haunting Melody," "On the Road to Calais," "The Rosary," "Oh Tennessee, I Hear You Calling Me!" "Old Black Joe," "Sweet and Low," "The Everything," "Tell That to the Marines," "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Why Do They All Take the Night Boat to Albany?" "I'll Say She Does," "The Swanee River," "Mammy's Coal Black Rose" and "That Old Traumerei." Mr. Jolson will also have the assistance of an orchestra of fifty musicians, and the orchestral program will range all the way from Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture" to most popular and fascinating jazz of today. The orchestra will be under the direction of Al Goodman.

PEMBERTON INN OPENING.

Tonight's the night at Pemberton Inn.

This justly popular resort, more attractive than ever, will open for the season this evening. During the Winter and Spring all parts of the property have been renovated and refreshened preparatory to a season of what is expected to be unexampled prosperity.

To this end new attractions have been engaged and far off California drawn upon for a novelty that should create a sensation in the quarter. This special feature is The Banjo Harmony Boys from San Francisco, five of them, who will furnish the music for the dansant and the singers. They have unusual features on their program and really give a whole show themselves.

The Inn is under the management of George A. Dodge as last season, and this means the best of everything in the way of food and entertainment.

'LITTLE MOTHERS' SOCIETY

A new organization promising splendid results was formed in New York last week called the "Little Mothers." Its activities command countrywide recommendation. Mothers throughout the country of soldiers delayed in any of the various debarkation hospitals found around New York who cannot visit them in person and who worry because there is no one to call upon them or provide diversion may be sure that they will receive ample attentions of these kind which mean much in their dreary days of convalescence.

All a mother of one of these boys has to do is to write to the "Little Mothers," founded by young women of Charles Dillingham's "She's a Good Fellow" company at the Globe Theatre, a new organization in New York, working in conjunction with Major Gillette of the Red Cross, and Major Rastedo of the Women's Motor Corps, and she can rest assured from then on her boy will be taken care of, and that, furthermore, she herself will receive a letter each week from some "Little Mother" telling her all those things about her son which she is anxious to hear and which no mere man ever thinks to put in a letter.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

Welcome news to the Somerville Theatre large clientele of patrons comes in the announcement that this highly reputable organization will offer for their approval, in person, a special arrangement with Selwyn & Company, Avery Hopwood's screamingly funny farce, "Nair and Warner." The presentation of this delightfully refreshing play takes place at their Davis square, Somerville, playhouse, during the entire week of May 19, both in the afternoon and evening. The production will be staged in identically the same manner as when this great laugh producer was presented at the Park Square Theatre several seasons ago for a record run. Manager Clyde E. McArdle, who possesses the happy faculty of knowing best what his patrons desire and his eagerness to give them at all times the latest successes, has spared no expense in offering this great play in the most faultless manner possible.

BOSTON THEATRE

Priscilla Dean, the dainty little screen star, plays the leading role in "The Exquisite Thief," the feature film at the Boston Theatre the coming week.

The vaudeville bill is a well arranged one and includes the Reynolds in a novelty singing and dancing act, Julian Curtis, a singing comedienne; Master Gabriel and company in a new comedy act, Powers and Wallace, a singing and talking duo with plenty of new stuff, and Erford's novelty aerial act.

'EYES OF WORLD' PROLOGUE IS PLACED HERE

Boston of 25 Years Ago Is Pictured in Connection With Wright's Story

Readers of Harold Bell Wright's "The Eyes of the World" need not be told of the numerous thrills with which the story abounds even in its original form. But the prologue added in the picture in order to show the influences of heredity upon the characters permits the introduction of more exciting scenes, and they are located in Boston, of all places. Not that Boston is immune from such experiences, but the Hub twenty-five years ago, the time of the prologue, heard little of such affairs as are illustrated in the picture.

There is a thrilling encounter in the home of the little music teacher between the man who has deceived her and her brother that makes some of the scraps at the athletic club of the present day seem quite tame. The seducer resents the interference of the brother and refuses to quit the house when ordered to do so, and the men clinch. Then follows a rough-and-tumble fight that would delight the frequenters of places where the manly art is demonstrated.

Round the room the contestants reel in their grapple, furniture is upset and the young man is apparently about all in when as a last despairing effort he seizes a plaster bust from its pedestal and throws it with unerring aim at the head of the departing brother. He drops as the bust is smashed to atoms and the young man hastily quits the scene, under the impression that he has killed his man. His further adventures in the West are equally as exciting.

He's From Mayo.

Tom Moore, who comes to the Modern Theatre all next week in his newest photoplay, "One of the Finest," is an interesting fellow for many reasons and an unusual actor in that little is known of his preferences and prejudices. After considerable questioning and not a little observing, these facts have been learned about him:

He says he is older than he looks. He was born in County Mayo, Ireland, and has been an actor since his early youth and a screen favorite for a number of years.

He lives with his mother in Hollywood, Cal., across from the studios in Culver City, and they both like Irish tea in the evenings after dinner.

Tom Moore dislikes anything showy and lives almost in Spartan simplicity. He doesn't wear a one article of jewelry except necessary cuff links and studs and uses a modern roadster to reach locations when the weather and distance do not permit him to ride his horse over. The steed's name is "Pat."

In the east he was a devotee of golf. Now he most enjoys riding and polo.

He hates to write letters and his professional correspondence weighs heavily on his conscience. But he is never so pleased as when he receives criticism or commendation from his friends and fans of the screen.

Like some natives of Erin he is superstitious. His mascot is what you'd expect, a bit of the Blarney Stone. He carries it in his lower left waistcoat pocket and, though this is rather a secret, he kisses it before beginning a new picture.

"Native Ohio."

For one of the scenes of "Vicky Van," her new picture, Ethel Clayton, is seen in an art gallery. This gallery was built at the studio, but the paintings were the real thing and were valued at $10,000. They are all by California artists of note.

"Vicky Van," which will be shown at the Beacon Theatre next week, is a detective mystery story by Carolyn Wells, with the scenario by Marion Fairfax. Robert G. Vignola directed the production. The problem surrounds the death of a wealthy New Yorker named Randolph Schuyler, and his young wife is suspected. Ronny, the detective, solves the mystery and frees the wife from suspicion. A romance has developed meanwhile, and the picture ends most happily.

Mystery stories are always popular, and the public will welcome one that is done in the most finished and approved fashion. "Vicky Van" will meet every expectation. Emory Johnson heads a capable supporting cast.

BEZDEK IN HUB WITH PEPPERY CORSAIRS

The Pittsburgh Pirates, who have slashed their way into the first division, despite injuries to stars, and other sorts of handicaps, opened a four-game series with the unfortunate Braves this afternoon at the Home of Hard Luck.

Those Pirates have something, as all managers in the well known National League are beginning to admit. Hugo Bezdek plays a system.

He is sort of new edition of Stallings; has been getting the "breaks" and, consequently, winning. While Carey, Southworth, Mayer and Caton, four of his real stars, have been out of the game since shortly after the season opened, Hugo has been rattling along.

PIRATES PASS CUBS.

Now his heroes are back, or coming back, and the Corsairs loom up like a danger post in the league. They have passed the Cubs and are in a position to win a very exalted place with a few more victories.

The Braves lost the last one to Cardinals, 4-2, though they outhit the enemy and had a million chances to pull the game out. But something unfortunate always happened, as it has been since the curtain went up.

There were a few bright spots. Herzog played fine baseball and hit in a fashion that must have made the canteloupe seeds in Maryland sprout an extra inch. He got two real blows and was robbed of another that might have wrecked the game when Jack Miller speared a smoking liner.

WASN'T NORTHROP'S FAULT.

Then Jake Northrop went in and pitched three chapters and let the bottles open without a safety.

The Rabbit also tore off a few plays that proved he is himself again. There's some slight consolation in all that, so the best we can do is make the best of it.

This afternoon's battle shaped up like a tilt of southpaws. Arthur Nehf, a Pirate nemesis anyhow, was ready to perform for the Stallings side, while it was Earl Hamilton's turn to work for Pittsburgh.

RED SOX OPEN SERIES IN ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., May 17.—Those bettilted Red Sox descended upon the Mound City this morning with "blind" in their eyes and determined to annihilate Jim Burke's lowly Browns in the four-game series starting this afternoon at Sportman's Park.

At that the Browns have bagged their last three games, which is going some for a St. Louis team. They won the getaway day battle in Chicago and shut out the Macks two straight on the local lot.

The Champions were in ugly mood after dropping the rubber game to Kid Gleason's pale-hosed pennant pretenders in Chicago despite the fact they were admirably up against some great hurling while facing Red Faber.

Barrow was undecided as to his choice of pitcher to open the set with the locals but intimated that he would send Carl Mays against the home folks. If he switches, Dumont or Pennock will hurl.

HAS GALLIA READY.

Burke was holding Bert Gallia, two-time conqueror of the White Sox, in reserve for the struggle. Then, Davenport also is ready and "right."

The Red Sox had a great opportunity to sweep ahead in the pennant race in the Chicago final after getting away to a three-run advantage in the opening round, but were unable to hold the Gleasonites in check.

Ordinarily a three-talley margin would have sufficed was Caldwell, who was pitted against Faber, but the genis swatting behind the latter went and not only overtook the Red Sox but went them one better by lusty walloping.

Faber got away to a false start by passing Hooper and Barry and followed by making a peg into deep right field while handling Strunk's sacrifice, and the error enabled Hooper and Barry to register, while Amos plugged to third.

Ruth got an infield hit, which failed to help Strunk in his pilgrimage, but the latter raced home with the third marker when Weaver was engaged in casting out McInnis.

FABER AT HIS BEST.

Having worked a lot of wildness out of his system Faber braced after the opener and was a whale of pitcher in the last eight innings, although nicked for another tally in the sixth inning.

Then the Bostonians got their third and last hit. It was a single by Vitt and came behind a pass to Ruth and gave them their fourth and last run.

Faber went to the slap supposedly suffering from a kink in his neck. Gleason hopes he is right as he is flicted every time he is asked to take his turn on the firing line, for the Faber of yesterday was very far good as the Faber who tumbled the Giants in the 1917 World's Series.

Baseball News

Catcher John Henry, late of the Braves, now of the Red Sox, will join the Champions in St. Louis tomorrow. He's tickled to death at the turn to the American League. Letting him go was a straight cash proposition.

Max Carey of the Pirates, who has been out of the game with an arm abscess, is expected by his deposed manager to get into the Braves series. Southworth and Mayer, two other Corsair regulars, are on the hospital list.

Little Caton, who was a shortstop sensation last season, was injured early in the campaign, and then found when he returned that Jim Terry was playing such sensational ball the shortfield was mortgaged against him, meaning Caton.

Manager Hugo Bezdek of the Pittsburgh team, will not do any bench directing today or Monday. He is serving a three-day suspension assetges for an argument in Philly. Casey Stengel was fined $25 for par-

BOWL SCENE OF CRIMSON-YALE TRACK DUEL

New Haven, May 17.—The Harvard track team was in hopes of winning today's meet in the Bowl, making the number of track victories even, for this afternoon's engagement is the twenty-sixth dual meet and the Elis already own thirteen victories.

Captain Moore in the sprints, George Krogness in the hurdles and jumps; Dennis O'Connell in the mile, and Hank Flower in the broad jump, and Harvard's outstanding athletes taking part.

Captain Jim Braden, in the shotput; Gerald Sweeney in the pole vault; Landon in the high jump, and Jones in the dashes, are Yale's best bets.

MURNANE MONUMENT TO BE UNVEILED ON JUNE 8

The unveiling of the monument in memory of the late Timothy H. (Tim) Murnane will take place Sunday afternoon, June 8, in Calvary Cemetery, West Roxbury. It was deemed fitting that the ceremony should be held when the American League teams would be in the city, as the American League erected the monument in honor of the much loved Boston baseball writer, who died two years ago.

PHAN JACKSON'S GOWDY PARTY BIG SUCCESS

Four more days, fans! Then the Hank Gowdy testimonial fund will be closed.

So it is up to the thousands of admirers of the Braves' great catcher to send in their contributions without delay.

The announcement that the fund would close at midnight next Tuesday has caused renewed activity among those desiring to pay tribute to baseball's noted war hero. Many additional contributions have been received and the fund is close to the $500 mark.

The Twentieth Century Billiard Company added $11.11 to the sum being collected by the American. This was half the receipts of Baseball Day at the popular resort for cue and billiard enthusiasts.

The patrons of the hall made up $15 between them, which brought the total for Baseball Day to $46.11.

RABBIT AT SHOW.

A special feature was a pool match in the evening between Stonewall Jackson, king of baseball rooters, and Rabbit Maranville. As Stonewall is a former New England champion, the midget shortstop is not obliged to give any odds for his 50-38 defeat.

Thus, just to show he has a little something on the ordinary pool player, Maranville bested Lena Blackburn of the Braves by a count of 25-24.

J. Alpert Sullivan naturally could not pass up the Gowdy fund. He's come to bat with a $10 contribution. N. B.—Sport has been dropping his bit into the pans every time they have been passed at the bowling clubs.

Then, the members of the Farrington A. A. of Brockton added $18.42 to the fund. George Freeman, match maker of the Fenway A. A., was in charge of the collection. He has been among the most active in boosting the drive to give a fitting testimonial to Hankus Pankus.

FIGHT FANS GENEROUS.

As the fight fans have contributed two-fifths of total to date, it looks as though those who restrict their sporting activities to attending baseball games should wake up.

Athletes of the Gowdy type are not common. So, let everybody rally to the support of the testimonial.

Hank risked death for us all for nine months in France!

Nobody ever suffered from giving a nickel or dime to a patriotic cause!!

So, all together; over the top for Gowdy!!!

MORRIS KONTOFF,
DORCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL
FOOTBALL, BASEBALL, HOCKEY AND TRACK.

KONTOFF is one of the four letter men at Dorchester High. He was one of the star halfbacks on last Fall's football eleven and plays in the infield on the nine. Hockey and track are his other two sports. This is his last year at the High school and he will enter college in the Fall.

Relian Barker of Somerville High, and Bailey of Medford High, are two fifteen-year-old juniors who are holding their own in the box against fourteen two or three years their senior. A great future for both juveniles can be easily predicted.

Ted Senger, former Brighton High athlete, is playing a great game in the outfield for Noble & Greenough nine. His hitting is a feature of practically every game.

* * *

Hot archy, Commerce's new catcher, is showing fine form in the box.

Richmond, while not a spectacular player, is putting up a good steady game for Newton High. He has come through at the bat in fine style.

Jack Gillie has been offered a job with Heinie Wagner's Lowell team. If he signs some college will be cheated out of a great backstop.

Birtwell, Everett High's outfielder, is taking a crack at twirling and showing very fair form.

Salmon, St. John's Prep. third baseman will be playing against his former mates when his team meets Commerce today. He is a clever workman at the hot corner and he swings a mean bat.

PAL REID KAYOS DE LUCCA IN BIG HURRY

By RINGSIDE

Pal Reid of the Navy stopped Patsy DeLucca, North End middleweight, in three rounds in the feature bout at the Commercial A. C. A left-hand smash to the jaw put DeLucca out of the picture.

Reid outclassed his opponent from the start. He amused himself during the first two sessions by scoring with right-hand jabs as he danced around the ring merrily with that bread-winner extended. When he called his left into play in the third stanza, the boys started for the exits.

Johnny Murray of the Navy substituted for Battling Sylvia against Young Lee of Chelsea, and hit the canvas for the count in the fifth chapter. Jack Sheehan refereed the bout and Murray Yens judged.

Young Gibbs of Woonsocket, made a chopping block of Billy Duffy of Everett, in their ten-round skirmish.

Young Cahill of Everett secured a draw with Frank Tilo of the North End, who substituted for George Brooks of Lowell in the curtain-raiser. Frank Ducey was the third man in the ring in the first two engagements.

AND now there was no more time to be lost; no more stops until he arrived in Paris. A taxicab rushed him and his luggage across the most empty city a train, hours earlier than the regular steamer train, carried him to London, where, as he drove through the crowded, cubilt streets, in a hansom cab, he could see news venders holding up strips of paper on which was printed in great, black letters:

THE BRITISH FLEET SAILS;
SPY IN HOUSE OF COMMONS
CHARLES WILSON, M.P., ACCUSED
Missing Member Supposed to Be
Karl Breslau, International Spy

And he noticed knots of people pausing to buy the latest editions of the papers offered.

But Neeland had no time to see much more of London than that—glimpses of stately gray buildings and green trees, of monuments and palaces where soldiers in red tunics stood guard; the crush of traffic in the city; trim, efficient police, their helmets strapped to their heads, disentangling the streams of vehicles, halting, directing everything with calm and undisturbed precision; a squadron of cavalry in brilliant uniforms leisurely emerging from some park between iron railings under stately trees, then the crowded confusion of a railroad station, but not the usual incidents of booking and departure, because he was to travel by a fast goods trains under telegraphed authority of the British government.

And that is about all that Neeland saw of the mightiest city in the world on the eve of the greatest conflict among the human races that the earth has ever witnessed, or ever shall, D. V.

The flying goods train that took him to the channel port whence a freight packet was departing, offered him the luxury of a leather padded armchair in a sealed and grated mail van.

Nobody disturbed him; nobody questioned him; the train officials were civil and incurious, and went calmly about their business with all the traditional stolidity of official John Bull.

Neeland had plenty of leisure to think as he sat there in his leather chair which vibrated but did not sway very much; and his mind was fully occupied with his reflections, for, so far, he had not had time to catalogue, index, and arrange them in proper order, so rapid and so startling had been the sequence of events since he had left his studio in New York for Paris, via Brookhollow, London, and other points east.

One thing in particular continued to perplex and astonish him, the identity of a member of Parliament, known as Charles Wilson, suddenly revealed as Karl Breslau, an international spy.

Flight of Fancy

The wildest flight of fancy of an irresponsible novelist had never created such a character in penny-dreadful fiction. It remained incomprehensible, almost impossible, to Neeland that such a thing could be true.

Also the young man had plenty of food for reflection, if not for luncheon, in trying to imagine exactly how Odile Beard and Captain Saba, and that strange, illegical young girl, Ilse Dumont, had escaped from the Volhynia.

Probably, in the darkness, the flashing boat which they expected had signalled in some way or other. No doubt the precious Ilse had been on to the water in their life-jackets and had been picked up even before armed sailors on the Volhynia descended to their empty state-rooms and took possession of what luggage could be discovered, and of the three bombs with their charred wicks still soaking on the sopping bed.

And now the affair had finally ended, Neeland believed, in spite of Captain West's warnings. For how could these industrious conspirators in a fishing smack off the Lizard do him any further damage?

If they had managed to relay information concerning him to their friends by some set of preconcerted signals, possibly the regular steamer train to and out of London might be watched.

Thinking of this, it presently occurred to Neeland that friends in France, also, might be stirred up in time to offer him their marked attentions. This, no doubt, was what Captain West meant, and Neeland considered the possibility as the flying train whirled him toward the Channel.

He asked if he might smoke, and was informed that he might, and he lighted a cigarette and stretched out on his chair, a little hungry from lack of luncheon, a little tired from lack of sleep, but, in virtue of his vigorous and youthful years, comfortable, contented and happy.

Never, he admitted, had he had such a good time in all his life, despite the fact that chance alone, and not his own skill and alertness and perspicacity, had saved his neck.

No, he could not congratulate himself on his cleverness and wisdom; sheer accident had saved his skin—and once the complex and inaccountable vagary of a feminine mind had saved him from annihilation so utter that it slightly sickened him to remember his position in Ilse Dumont's stateroom as she lifted her pistol coolly and made good her boast as a dead shot. But he formed himself to take it lightly.

"Good Lord!" he thought to himself. "Was ever a man in such a hellish position except in melodrama? And what a movie that would have made! And what a shot that girl proved herself to be! Certainly she could have killed me there at Brookhollow! She could have riddled me before I ducked, even with that nickel-plated affair about which I was sas enough to taunt her!"

Lying in his chair, cheek on arm, he continued to ponder on what had happened, until the monotonous vibration no longer interfered with his inclination for nap. On the contrary, the slight, rhythmic jolting soothed him and gradually induced slumber, and he slept there on the running train, his head pillowed on a kettle purre through the watches of the night over a bashed but steady fire.

Greeted by Name

As he descended from the van on the officer of the freight packet greeted him by name, a sailor piled his luggage on a barrow, and Neeland walked through the vista of covered docks to the pier.

There was a lively wind whipping that notoriously bad-mannered streak of water known as the English Channel. Possibly it had been christened the French Channel in its manner might have been more polite. But there was now nothing visible about it to justify its sentimental psudonym of Silver Streak.

It was a dirty color, ominous of ill-temper beyond the gray breakwater to the northward; and it frothed and fumed inshore and made white and ghastly faces from the open sea.

But Neeland, dining from a tray in a porthole pit contrived to the use of the casual super-cargo, rejoiced because he adored the sea, inland lubber that he had been born and where the tides of fate had stranded him. For, to a New Yorker, the sea, even far away, is as far as it seems to the Parisian. And only when chance business takes him to the Battery does a New Yorker realize the vastness of the ocean to that vast volume of ceaseless dissonance called New York.

Neeland ate cold meat and bread and cheese, and washed it down with bitters.

He was nearly asleep on his sofa when the packet cast off.

He was sound asleep when, somewhere in the raging darkness of the Channel, he was thrown from the sofa against the bunk opposite—into which he presently crawled and lay, still half asleep, mechanically rubbing a maltreated shin.

Twice more the bad-mannered British Channel was violently rude to him; each time he crawled back to stick like a limpet in the depths of his bunk.

Except when the Channel was too discourteous, he slept as a sea bird sleeps afloat, tossing outside thundering combers which batter basalt rocks.

Even in his deep, refreshing sea sleep, the subtle sense of sublaration—of well-being—which comes with the sea always brought to him, possessed him. And, deep within him, the drop of fear which always purred as a kettle purre through the watches of the night over a

HE reached his room after only a slight sprinkling, for the house in which he had his hall bedroom was not far from the subway.

Once here, he realized that he was hungry; that he had had nothing to eat since breakfast, and that it was now three o'clock. However, he would wait until late in the afternoon before sallying forth again. Perhaps it would stop raining by then.

But at six o'clock it was still raining, so, changing from his civilian clothes to his old uniform, the young man walked out to seek his dinner.

At the rotisserie near the corner he got a hot meal—a better one than he would have taken had he not been pretty sure of securing the position as Samuel G. Leighton's chauffeur.

Dinner ended, and the inner man satisfied, David De Laine was seized by a sudden impulse. He would take a trip to the house of his prospective employer, have a good look at it and see what it was like.

The house he sought was not far from Central Park, and David approached it curiously.

It certainly gave every avidence of being the home of a wealthy man. Aunt Jeanne had spoken several times of the wealth of Desiree Leighton's father.

Strolling slowly by the big house, David gazed at the windows. Suddenly he uttered a low exclamation and stopped in his walk.

Against the lighted interior of what he supposed was the drawing room he saw the outline of a girl's head for an instant did it linger, while the hand was lifted to draw down the shade that a careless servant had forgotten to lower.

The lace curtains marred the silhouette, and David passed on, could that be Desiree Leighton, he wondered. Then, calling himself a fool, he retraced his steps to his hall-room.

CHAPTER IV.

THAT night at the dinner table in Mr. Leighton's house, the talk turned upon the late Miss Jeanne DeLaine and her peculiarities. It also touched upon the new chauffeur.

There were three persons at table—the master of the house, his daughter and his sister—Mrs. Duffield. The last named member of the group lived in a small apartment around the corner from her brother's home, and was a frequent guest here.

The fact that she lived so near was a comfort to the lonely widow as well as a pleasure to her niece, for Aunt Sylvia was always ready to come in at any time of day or night to act as chaperon or companion.

Samuel Leighton smiled across the table at his daughter as she took her seat tonight.

"It seems to me you look very fine," he remarked affectionately. "Not but what you always look nice—but you have on something different tonight, darling tonight, haven't you? I see—the new necklace?"

"Yes, the girl affirmed, "the new chain and locket. Do I look fine? It is not really a necklace, you know. It is pretty, isn't it?"

"Very pretty," her father agreed, and Mrs. Duffield added an admiring "lovely."

"I always feel just a bit uncomfortable about it," the girl went on. "It was very kind of Miss DeLaine to leave it to me in her will—yet I wonder if she would have done so, if I had not expressed to her my admiration of it."

"My dear, of course she would!" Mrs. Duffield declared.

"I doubt if you cast envious eyes at it," the father teased.

"No, I did not," the girl admitted. "I remember just what I did do, Miss DeLaine showed me the pendant as if by in her jewelry case, and exclaimed at its beauty, and I said that the sapphire was one of the loveliest I had ever seen, and that the diamond hanging from the bottom of it gave it a wonderful effect. She looked pleased and asked me if I would like to wear the pendant. I said "No thank you!" very promptly. But later, she remarked, 'you may wear it often in days to come.'"

Her father appeared slightly amused. "And what did you say to that prophecy?" he asked.

Her Father Laughs

"Nothing. I thought it best to hold my tongue."

Mr. Leighton laughed aloud. "You must know, my dear Sylvia," he explained to Mrs. Duffield, "that poor Miss DeLaine — while as good as gold and always most kind to our little girl—had her peculiarities. And one of these was her nephew."

"Her nephew?" Mrs. Duffield echoed. "What do you mean?"

"Only that she had a nephew who, according to her, was a paragon of all the manly virtues, and she would have been delighted, I really believe, if he and Desiree had fallen in love with each other."

"The age, dear!" Desiree interjected.

"Miss DeLaine thought I looked like Mamma, who, as you remember, was a friend of hers."

"Yes, I remember," Mrs. Duffield said.

"Well, Miss DeLaine seemed to think that it was her duty to arrange for my future by finding a husband for me, and she was all the time talking about her dear nephew. Ugh! I hated him!"

"Why? Wasn't he agreeable?" the aunt inquired.

"I never saw him—thank goodness!" Desiree said. "He was careful to stay away from his aunt's house on the occasion of my visit there."

"Perhaps she has talked to him of you as much as she had talked to you of him," Mrs. Duffield ventured. "But it was not very gallant of him to stay away, was it?"

"The girl Desiree flushed. "I would hate to think I was flung at him," she said. "I would have despised him if, under the circumstances, he had called to see me. I despised him because he didn't. But, never mind! He went to France months ago."

He may not even be alive now," Mrs. Duffield suggested, adding, softly, "perhaps he and his aunt are together by now."

"Perhaps," Desiree murmured, her face changing, "but I hope he is still alive. For, really, I never knew anything against him. Poor Miss DeLain! If she had not loved me she would not have been so anxious about my state. I suppose Nor would she have left me this lovely pendant. By the way, Dad, —I wonder who got all her things, and her money?"

"Her nephew and friends, I suppose," the father replied. "But of course I do not know. If the nephew was killed in France, there would be no heir left. By the way, what was her nephew's name?"

The New Chauffeur

"David DeLaine," the girl replied. "He was Miss DeLaine's dead brother's son. Dear Davy," she used to call him. I got so tired of hearing of the noble David."

"Yes, the girl affirmed, "the new chauffeur is named David. It is not really a necklace, you know. It is pretty, isn't it?"

"Very pretty," her father agreed, and Mrs. Duffield added an admiring "lovely."

"I always feel just a bit uncomfortable about it," the girl went on. "It was very kind of Miss DeLaine to leave it to me in her will—yet I wonder if she would have done so, if I had not expressed to her my admiration of it."

How to Cure Stammering

By Brice Belden, M. D.

THERE are said to be about one hundred and fifty thousand stammerers in the United States, which gives some idea of the magnitude of the problem presented by speech impediments.

In a community of one hundred thousand persons there would be found from four hundred to one thousand stammerers. Stammering may be noted at all ages, even from the beginning of speech, but usually makes its one female sex afflicted. In some cases the spasm of the muscles concerned in speech is so strong that the victim cannot utter at all if anyone besides himself is present, and may even be obliged to carry a writing pad around with him in order to make himself understood.

The obvious fact about stammering is that it is a speech difficulty, but the deeper fact is an inward emotional disturbance. Of course, after years of stammering, habit is established, and then the emotional element plays little or no part in the trouble.

The emotional disturbance is a social phenomenon, and is associated with a feeling of embarrassment with respect to the stammerers speaking relationship to those in the immediate social group.

The explanation of stammering, in short, is found in the "normal" action of the nervous and muscular control apparatus of the mechanism of speech, incited by social emotion.

There is no anatomical imperfection in the brain or in the organs of speech of those afflicted by stammering.

When alone, the subject practically loses his tendency to stammer, but the tendency immediately reasserts itself upon the advent of a person or persons. Anything which increases emotion excites or increases the stammering.

Ninety per cent of the cases originate before the seventh year of life. Cases due to fright or imitation develop later.

Stammerers possess superior intellects and are likable people. Charles Lamb, the great English writer, stammered badly.

Very few outgrow the "grow out" of stammering without treatment by medical experts. There are many swindlers and quacks who profess to cure it, even through correspondence methods.

Cure depends upon educating and training the stammerer into normal self-control or by all circumstances, and is best attained by medical specialists. The afflicted individual's personality and psychology must be studied and understood.

The Mystery of Matter

By Garrett P. Serviss

DISintegration" from radium means disintegration of the independent units of which the particle is composed." If it takes 25,000 years before these units have all escaped off into space, and the particle wholly vanishes, is that because of their inconceivable density in the original grouping? 2. If a cannon ball could be rendered equally dense, and compressed say into the size of a pinhead, and yet retain all the matter of its more bulky form, would that convey a fair idea? In a word, is it their density that gives to many bodies so less quadrillions of particles to be locked up in such small space?

J. M. W.

EMANATIONS from radium represent one step in a kind of natural alchemy," taking the word alchemy in its popular sense of a transmutation of elements, or metals, one into another, as for instance lead into gold.

There is a fine chemists, and men of science in general, smiled at the old alchemists as dreamers. "The elements," they said, "consist each of its own kind of atoms, and atoms are indivisible and unchangeable. It is ridiculous to talk of an atom of one kind turning into an atom of another kind."

But then came the surprising discovery—a scientific accident—that atoms—at least the "atoms" hitherto known—are not indivisible and unchangeable. This put an entirely different complexion on the whole matter; alchemy, or the idea underlying it, began to loom up as a scientific possibility, or a possible practice of science.

And in a little while—so fast do these things go when once started—one element was actually seen producing another element in a modern chemical laboratory, where the mocking face of the mystical Dr. Faustus might have been imagined grinning out of the corners.

But a closer examination showed that what was happening was not, after all, the thing that the alchemists wanted to have happen. They wanted to take some cheap, base metal, melt it, or subject it to some other process, and see it turn into the one metal that was worth while—gold. What really happened was that out of a certain mineral came another. It was more like a birth than a transmutation. The original mineral was the "mother element," and the derivative one was its child.

Professor Theodore W. Richards puts the matter in the form of a sort of genealogical tree. To start with we have an elemental substance, or what has been regarded as an elemental substance, uranium—a rare thing on the earth, by the way, and never much noticed until these strange happenings began.

Of its own accord, an atom of uranium "loses" three atoms of another element, helium, and thereby is converted into a third element called radium. The radium thus brought into existence, or at least out into the light of scientific recognition, proves to be a very lively child, far more active than its "mother," and it quickly loses one atom of helium—for there seems to be a plenty of that strange substance lurking in some form behind all these changes—and as a result of this loss the radium is converted into the so-called "emanation." This is a still livelier child, but of extremely brief vital span, for it almost immediately loses four more atoms of helium, and thereby is converted into lead.

So, beginning with uranium, we have a series of automatic expulsions of a "se of helium, three the first time, the second and four the last time, and each time, what we may speak of as the original substance, changes face or is converted into another substance, the final product being lead. The thing that every time is helium, the thing that finally remains, when all the helium is out, is lead; so that there seem to be two descendants, if we may so call them, of the atom of uranium, viz.: lead and helium. They remain, strange brothers, but their mother's genius has sacrificed itself and vanished in bringing them into existence. This looks like spontaneous generation in the mineral world.

Now I am not an investigator of these extraordinary phenomena—I can only think about them as best I can, and such thoughts, as distinguished from quoted facts, are only suggestions which may or may not have any value. One very great difficulty in any attempt to make clear to the ordinary, unscientific person the nature of these profound discoveries, which seem to be leading on to the great secret of the nature of matter and the enigma of existence itself, is that the investigators themselves do not make clear their results in common language, and moreover, they are kept busy explaining and interpreting old results in the light of new ones continually developing.

Now the atom of uranium is the heaviest atom known, and it does seem very probable that this particular substance, noted for its great atomic weight, should be, as far as at present is certainly known, the only one to start the automatic series of changes above described; but how or in what sense the atoms of its descendants remain concealed is it until their hour of birth is a mystery remaining to be explained.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To remove old varnish dissolve one pound of powdered ninety-eight per cent. caustic soda in three quarts of water and apply with an old brush. If a good brush is used in this solution it will be completely ruined. When the solution has been on for some time, apply another coat, and repeat until the varnish is softened through to the wood. Then take a clean scrubbing-brush and hot water and scrub till the woodwork is clean. Allow this to dry for several days, then the wood may be painted or stained to any desired shade. A good supply of clean water should be used when the stain is being removed; otherwise the soda left in the wood may possibly cause a new stain when put on. To make sure, it is advisable to wash the woodwork—after the varnish has been removed and the woodwork dried—with vinegar; this will "kill" any soda left in the wood.

Paraffin is useful for the removal of paint stains. Dip the stain into the paraffin, rub between the fingers, and then wash thoroughly with soap and water.

SHOULD MRS. CASTLE HAVE WAITED LONGER?

The beautiful (late) widow of Vernon Castle has probably been the most advertised woman in America. Her beauty and grace are household words; her style of hair-dressing and her clothes of all sorts have been admired and copied by everybody. She has also danced their way into fame and fortune, and then was equally admired Vernon Castle, himself to win loftier laurels as an aviator. And only about a year ago the world thrilled with pride at his heroic death and sympathy for the bereaved young widow. Now—Irene Castle is a widow no longer, but a bride again. Should she have waited longer—or closer her new marriage pay the highest compliment to her late hero husband? This is interestingly discussed in the next

Stocks Strong in New York and Boston Markets

MARINE ISSUES MAKE BIG GAINS

Central Foundry Preferred Advanced More Than 10 Points

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York this morning, but closed below the highest level of an active session. Marine issues made large gains and demand for equipment issues was indicated by the more than 1-point advance for Central Foundry. There is talk of railroads forming a $400,000,000 car trust pool. Among issues to sell at record high prices were Fisher Body, Marine common, American International and International Harvester. Morning advances ranged from fractions to more than ten points, reviewing the whole list. Railroads were strong and active, being more prominent than industrials in early trading. Coppers improved as a group. Several specialties moved upward. Motors were one of the last firm. There was the usual week-end profit-taking. This affected prices somewhat near the end, but the tone remained bullish.

U. S. Steel ranged from 102¾ to 103½, closing with ¼ gain at 103. Marine common closed at 52⅝, an advance of 4⅝. Its record highest, according to today, was 53⅝. Marine preferred closed with 6¾ gain at 123¾. American International Corporation closed at 92¾, up 2¾. It sold as high as 94⅜, its high record figure. Atlantic Gulf sold during the day as high as 107⅞ and closed with ⅝ advance at 106¾.

Among stocks to sell at their year's highest were St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, Rock Island, Reading, New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie 1st preferred and Kennecott.

Total sales today were 745,000 shares; bonds, $6,414,000. Week sales totaled 3,726,100 shares; bonds, $70,914,000.

BOSTON MARKET OPENED FIRM.

The Boston market opened firm and most issues raised higher later. Mexica Copper continued to advance, selling at its record highest, as did Warren Brothers common. Arizona Commercial and General Inv sold at their 1919 highest. Packing issues were strong and United Fruit advanced two points on its first sale. U. S. Smelting, American Telephone and New Haven showed irregular and changed little in quotations. It was a busy short session. It is planned to have the Boston Stock Exchange next week the common stocks of the Waldorf System, the American International Corporation, the Mexican Investment Company, the Highest Producing & Refining Company and Gray & Davis.

Highs for the year were reached by Isle Royale and New Cornells. Warren Brothers sold as high as 51, and closed with 50¾ bid. Utah Apex, Seneca was up 2⅞ at 23, a highest record price. Issues to gain a point or more included Mexican Metals, Swift & Co., Swift International, Mohawk and Osceola. Copper Range closed at 42¾, a decline of 1⅛.

Copper at 16½ Cents

A number of copper producers have advanced their price for metal to 16½ cents a pound. No sales at that figure are reported as yet, although it is said one selling interest refused to accept it for mid-summer deliveries. Good business has been done at 16¼ cents a pound.

New York Bank Statement.

New York, May 17.—The statement of clearing house banks for the week differs an increase of $14,394,880 in surplus reserve for the week, while there was an average condition increase of $5,000,000. The statement also shows the following changes: Average loans increased $17,000; demand deposits increase $45,898,000; time deposits decrease, $25,000; circulation decrease, $8,032,000; demand deposits decrease, $2,963,000; time deposits decrease, $1,000,000.

Foreign Exchange Weak.

New York, May 17.—There was a further decline in Frenchs and Italian exchange today, it being difficult to obtain bids for either francs or lire. Sterling was quite firm at 4 65½ for demand and 4 68¾ for cables.

They Dovey Brigade in Parks May Use Sound Detectors

Bridgeport, Ct., May 17.—The lid is on spooning in Bridgeport parks and may remain so. The brigade must either remain in the front parlors or adopt sound-detecting devices to defeat the Park Commission in its new scheme of campaigning against the love cloud in the trees.

For the unfeeling department has acquired foot-pedal bicycles for the park patrolmen to steal noiselessly upon caressing couples—a stealthiness that they were unable to put over while mounted on noisy motorcycles.

The police tried to clamp the lid on spooning in Bridgeport's parks last year without any approbrietic degree of success. For the mooney-woony-loony ones had a method of escape unequaled from the approved half-Nelsons and hammerlocks after they had been warned of the approach of the patrolmen by the explosions of their motors.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN MAY 17, 1919. BOSTON.

QUO VADIS?

A number of women—the wives of the strikers at Lawrence—visited the State House Wednesday to see Governor Coolidge and to tell him their story. Governor Coolidge saw fit to refuse to see these women, and they went away discouraged, some of them we are informed, weeping.

We wonder whether Governor Coolidge would refuse to see a delegation of the wives of William M. Wood and other owners of the Lawrence mills if THEY called to discuss the strike with him! Every workingman in Massachusetts knows that he would not refuse to see the wives of the MILL OWNERS! Yet what is the difference between the two sets of women? Is there any religion among white men or black or yellow that holds that the wives of these workingmen do not mean as much to whatever God men worship as any other class of women? Is there any theory of our American democracy, or any other democracy, which makes their interests and their views less important to an American public servant than the views and the interests of any other class? Is there anything in the life of Christ that indicates that He would not have received these workingmen's wives? It was the workingmen who received HIM "gladly." He chose workingmen exclusively for His disciples.

Governor Coolidge is not a cold-blooded and heartless man. Left to himself, we believe that he would gladly have received these women. But Governor Coolidge has associations with and a political dependency upon an element in this State which he fears would discountenance any courtesy to the wives of workingmen fighting to improve their conditions in life.

On the same day that the door of the Governor's office was closed in the face of these women, Mayor Hanson of Seattle comes to Boston and tells a body of intelligent Massachusetts business men a most grotesque and absurd story of the Seattle strike, and in the course of his statement he advocates making a cemetery of the place where workingmen of whom he does not approve happen to be standing in the course of a struggle for higher wages or shorter hours.

This man Hanson is a vain, ridiculous egotist, going about the country making a hero of himself in a situation where he was nothing but a manikin. If every one knew him and knew the real facts concerning the strike in Seattle, his statements would be insignificant. But few know him except his fellow-citizens in Seattle, and still fewer know the real facts about the strike in Seattle and how absurd his story of it is. The important thing, however, about his violent language is that serious, sensible business men—men who want to be one hundred per cent. American—applaud his sentiments. Their applause is thoughtless and comes from ignorance of the subject and some social prejudice.

But the workingmen of the country read about the Governors who will not see their wives and about men who advocate making special graveyards for them and about business men who applaud these sentiments. How long are these things going to continue and whither do intelligent men expect them to lead? Does it take a prophet to foresee the consequences of this hysteria?

The shame and injustice of it all is that the certain consequence of this reckless reaction which we are experiencing in America today involves the innocent as well as the guilty. It involves the men and women who want to be fair, who want to see justice done, who want to see our public servants treat everybody alike, who want to see the workingmen improve their conditions. It is the great middle class who always suffer from the excesses of both extremes of the social scale. It is high time that the middle classes of this country arouse themselves to stop the hysteria and reaction.

Pay at Least Part of the Debt America Owes Soldiers

Congress is to meet Monday in special session. It will have great, important work to do. But, fully realizing how important will be the duty of passing upon the peace treaty, we insist that it is exactly as important for Congress to deal fairly with the soldiers who have made that peace treaty possible.

These soldiers, their heroic work done, are coming home by thousands. They made no effort to be sure of their old jobs when they went away. It was enough for them that the country was in peril.

They left whatever they were doing for the training camps, confident that somehow or other they would get along when they returned.

But unless Congress takes some action, many of those boys are not going to get along at all. Only a portion of them have been able to find their old jobs. The very men who shouted and cheered for them, and patted them on the back as they marched away, are now "out" when they come asking for re-employment.

This is, of course, a scandalous state of affairs, but it exists.

What are these soldiers to do? They can find no jobs. They have no money. Most of them are demobilized far from their homes or from the places of their former employment.

There are no funds available by the War Department to care for them.

The only honorable, the only decent, thing for Congress to do is to vote these boys at least six months' pay.

They have earned this money a thousand times over. There is probably not one of them who did not go to war at a great financial sacrifice, hardly one—officer or man—but who would have earned far more than that six months' pay had he remained behind.

In denying it to them Congress will be paying a premium on slacking—it will say to all the world:

"We want our men to fight for us, if they will pay their own expenses. But when they have fought and won we are through with them. They can shift as best they can. It is not our business what becomes of them."

Gentlemen of the Congress, the honor of a nation is at stake. This country was saved from possible destruction by the bravest army that ever took the field. Men died and suffered and endured hardship and privation at the call of their country. You represent that country. Are you going to allow its name to be ranked with that of Mexico or a tatterdemalion Balkan kingdom, which sends its men forth to fight, and when they come home allows them and their families to starve?

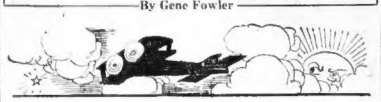
The "NC" Flagship Speaks

By Gene Fowler



ON the fleece of the furthermost sky,
Where the margins of morn begin,
The king of gulls am I,
And I mock at the thunder's din.
In the silence, where tracks the moon,
My brothers are planets and stars,
And I rival the roar of the sledges of Thor
As I knock at the portals of Mars.

MY blood is the oil that "sputs,"
My nerves are the taut steel wires,
My bones are the spars and struts,
And my wanderlust ne'er tires.
In the Valley of Midnight Cold
Too valiant am I to freeze,
My challenge goes where the tempest blows:
"I am bridging the seven seas!"

THE lash of the pitiless wave,
As it leaps in the scurrying gale,
Is the whip that Neptune gave
For the lumbering craft that sail.
But I am immune from the thongs
Of the goad of the chill sea-rime.
I'll drive to the goal, be it coast or Pole,
Or the Bottomless Pit—ON TIME!

WE are soaring, arrayed as three;
As sisters three we leave.
Together we spurn the sea—
Together the clouds we cleave.
Though our seven-league boots be rent,
Though the throats of our engines thirst,
By gad, sir, we'll beat the Britisher's fleet,
And we'll land there—AMERICA FIRST!

By K. C. B.

125 Leroy Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

DEAR K. C. B.—The girl who works next to me in a place where singing aloud is forbidden sometimes sings to herself. The boss told her yesterday that she "didn't contribute to her efficiency by singing to herself," and must stop it.

The big boss of this little boss is in New York. Maybe if you wrote a letter about singing and happiness and girls he would tell the little boss that there's no harm in a girl singing to herself. J. A. McL.

MY DEAR Mac.
I AM reminded.
OF ONE time.
WHEN I was a boss.
AND I hired a girl.
AND SHE was always cheerful.
AND SHE'D go about the office.
HUMMING OLD tunes.
AND SINGING to herself.
AND BECAUSE she was happy.
AND WE all liked her.
AND SHE kept in tune.
WE DIDN'T mind it.
AND AFTER a while.
SOME LUCKY man.
CAME ALONG and found her.
AND COAXED her away.
JUST TO sing for him.
IN THEIR own little home.
AND IF all of the wishes.
THAT WENT with her.
HAVE COME to be true.
THEN SHE'S singing yet.
AND, ANYWAY.
A NEW girl came.
AND SAT at her desk.
A SAD sort of a girl.
AND SHE must have discovered.
THAT WE didn't object.
TO SINGING girls.
FOR ALL of a sudden.
AND WITHOUT warning.
SHE STARTED to sing.
AS SHE did her work.
AND IT worried me so.
I'D HAVE to get up.
AND GO out of the room.
AND AFTER a while.
IT GOT so bad.
THAT I had to tell her.
IN A gentle way.
THAT SHE mustn't sing.
AND I'M telling you this.
IN SPITE of the fact.
THAT I think it's fine.
FOR GIRLS to be happy.
AND SING at their work.
AND IF I had a shop.
I'D MAKE it a rule.
THAT THE girls could sing.
AS MUCH as they liked.
EXCEPT AT the times.
WHEN I came around.
AND THEN I'd insist.
I SHOULD choose the ones.
THAT I wanted to sing.
AND THAT wouldn't be fair.
AND THERE you are.
AND IT all depends.

Are We Over-Regulating Personal Liberty?

Just How Far Can You Interfere With Man's Habits and Needs Without Having a Reaction? It Is a Problem, and Two Eminent Experts Have Taken Up the Subject in Tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser-American. One Discusses the Reason for the High Prices of Food. The Other Talks of Labor and Beer

Listen to any conversation you hear—in the trolley cars, on the ferries, in the hotels, in your own home—and it is reasonably certain that in the course of five minutes you will hear someone mention one of two subjects—

THE HIGH PRICES FOR FOOD

Or

PROHIBITION.

Interfere with man's habits or needs, attempt to "regulate" him, and there will be a protest.

As to the high cost of food, it is a vital subject, and prohibitive prices affect everyone vitally.

Tell a man he cannot do this or have that, and he immediately decides he is being regulated too much.

The chief statistician of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Archer Wall Douglas, has made some remarkable discoveries and conclusions regarding the high prices.

He says:

"The price of wheat is the keystone of the situation. Should the Food Control Corporation change the form of its guarantee to the farmer, and pay the farmer the difference between the market price and the government guaranteed price, there would ensue a decline in all food, dairy and poultry products that would bring the price of these articles back to a more natural level.

"It is an unpalatable but undeniable fact that, no matter how worthy our motive of how urgent the emergency, we cannot interfere with the laws of supply and demand and escape the penalty. And the high prices today of food products are the price we are paying for the war control of food which we rightly deemed so vital and so necessary."

His conclusions in full make one of the most intensely vital and interesting articles to appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser-American tomorrow.

As to beer—no less a person than Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, gives his views as to the effect prohibition will have upon labor.

From his wide observations he is able to draw certain conclusions which are important and which may be seriously considered by all.

He says:

"I am not an advocate of drinking. I am not an advocate of wine drinking, or even of beer drinking.

"Yet I am an anti-prohibitionist.

"I worked in a factory for twenty-six years with my shopmates and I know what I am talking about. The lunch that a laboring man takes with him to his work by noon becomes nearly dried out. By chipping in with several others, he can procure a small amount of beer with which to wash it down and make it palatable. After which he sits and reads for the balance of the hour.

"And in the evening, perhaps a pitcher or beer with his supper.

"It is his habit. It rests him and relaxes him.

"It is his habit. It is plebeian, perhaps. But it is also plebeian to dig ditches.

"It is not a question of right or wrong. It is not a question of whether we approve or disapprove of beer drinking. It is his habit.

"And when you invade a man's habits, what happens?"

Then Mr. Gompers tells what happens. He draws attention to conditions in other countries where the question of liquor has come up, and he adds—"The Birth of Bolshevism was in Prohibition."

His article will indeed be widely read and discussed. It is to appear exclusively in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser-American.

The war is over, but there is one organization which will not be forgotten for many years by the soldiers who fought in France. That organization is the Salvation Army. Many columns have been written about the achievements of the "lassies" and the men of the organization, but their story will never grow uninteresting. The Salvation Army is now preparing to raise a sum of money which it needs for its work. It is not to be presumed that they will have a difficult task in securing the desired sum, but the Boston Sunday Advertiser-American is in favor of doing all that is possible to advance the work, and forthwith will print tomorrow some articles of which every soldier will approve, and everyone else find interesting.

Every two years the Jews of the country meet for a convention of their religious union. This year they meet in Boston, and their first sessions will begin Monday. The Boston Advertiser-American tomorrow will print an article written by Rabbi Harry Levi which explains the momentousness of this gathering. He discusses some of the big problems which now confront the Jews. He wishes to make plain to people of other religions the aims and aspirations of the Jews of this country.

Mr. Louis C. Elson, the eminent authority on music who writes exclusively for the Boston Sunday Advertiser-American, has contributed an article for tomorrow's issue on "The Technique of Our Symphony Orchestra." It goes without saying that the many people in Boston who are students of music will wish to read Mr. Elson's words.

The question is asked, "Should Mrs. Vernon Castle have married so soon?" or rather, "Would she have married so soon if she had loved her late hero-husband as deeply as she professed?"

It has been argued that the greatest tribute a widow can pay her husband's memory is to promptly take another husband. A woman whose matrimonial experience has been wretched may well refuse to risk another unhappy marriage. But a widow's ready acceptance of a second partner would be an evidence of her faith in matrimony as the fruit of her first happy experience.

In letters quoted in a full page discussion of this so complex problem in next Sunday's Boston Advertiser-American the public will have a chance to judge.

There can be no doubt that if a happy first marriage induces a widow to marry a second time Irene Castle had every reason to become Mrs. Treman! And Treman, who, by the way, bears a remarkable resemblance in face and figure to Castle, seems to feel confident that he will be more the lover, even, than his predecessor.

And, of course, these are only a very few of the amazing and interesting articles which will be offered for your entertainment and instruction in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser-Ameri-
